But while his height hasn't stopped him, the future looks bright for the business major.

"Dwight acts as our head to our giant as he learns to be the coach on the floor," explained Lee. "A giant cannot operate without his head."

But while the big guys are rebounding and scoring. PSU's Miller is also busy at work.

"I feel being small is an advantage," said Miller. "I am quicker than most others plus I've found I get on the big guy's nerves."

"I feel," Miller continued, "it's not how tall or small you are as a college basketball player, but rather it's who works the hardest to give 110 percent everyday."

But the "little man" does have ideason what he feels he can do for PSU.

"My goals this season are to get better and quicker on defense," predicted Miller. "I want to become more a team
