Employees, Consumers hear responses from Washington

RED SPRINGS--Employees, directors and members of Lumbee River Electric Membership Corporation here have received responses from The White House, Rep. Charlie Rose, and Senators John East and Jesse Helms in the past few months on the proposed changes in the Rural Electrification Administration.

Anne Higgins, Director of Correspondence for the Reagan White House, responded that the President wants his total package of economic recovery passed in total without any changes. The U.S. Congress is well on its way with the Reagan package.

"The same type of response has been received from every official of the Reagan administration," said Jim Autry, spokesman for LREMC. "Our letters to the congressmen and the President stated that Office of Management and Budget Director David Stockman's plan for cutting the REA erroneously said the cuts would help beat inflation...but they won't."

"Since the REA revolving fund does just that...revolve money back and forth from the REA to the electric and telephone cooperatives, there is no impact on the federal budget," said Autry. "The consumers of rural electric cooperatives have paid their own way for over 40 years, but cuts in the REA will increase rates to rural consumers unfairly."

Responses to letters sent to Rep. Charlie Rose were encouraging as Rose is supportive of the REA as it presently exists. However, a recent constituent survey by Rose showed that 63 percent of the people in his district did not favor keeping the status quo in the REA. "Lack of knowledge has led the public to believe that Reagan's cuts in the REA financing authority will reduce the federal debt and again, it won't," said Autry.

Senator John East sent a letter to President Reagan on May 30 urging President Reagan to look closer at the proposed REA changes as they were concerned with off-budget items which would not help the American economic recovery.

East's responses to members and employees were most encouraging as work continues on the Reagan budget.

The only responses from Senator Jesse Helms did not help restore confidence in his support of the REA, according to Autry. "Our letters from Helms must have been mixed up by some of his staff," said Autry. "All of them were letters of regret that he could not meet us at a reception for the National Association of Realtors!"

"We will continue to work with our congressmen to keep the REA program strong and intact for the future," said Autry. "they have been contacted by letters, by phone and in person over the past four months. Our youth representatives have spoken with them as well as our contacts in the North Carolina Cooperative Council, the North Carolina Association of Electric Cooperatives and the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association."

"Contact with congressmen by their constituents is most important," Autry concluded. "It is their best feeling of the heartbeat of their districts and state."
