Baha'is appeal for help

After learning of more secret executions of their fellow Baha'is, thousands of members of the Baha'i Faith in Iran, without regard for their personal safety, have appealed directly, through letters and telegrams, to government officials to end their acts of aggression against the Baha'is. According to reports received by Mr. Bob Tansik, chairman of the District Teaching Committee of Central North Carolina, two more Baha'is were secretly executed in late February: Ibrahim Khayrah, a tradesman, on February 26 in Babul-Sar, and Husayn Vahdat-i-Haq, an electronics engineer on February 28 in Tehran. Their executions, without charges or trial or notification of family members, bring to 113 the number of Baha'is known to have been executed or abducted in Iran since the revolution.

"Today's report is the only one to have come out of Iran since the reports of the secret executions of 15 national and local leaders in late December and early January," said Tansik. "We can't help but think that other secret killings may have also occurred and may be increasing," he said.

Up until recently, the Iranian Baha'is had relied upon their leadership to make representations to the government on their behalf. However, with scores of local and national Baha'i leaders having been executed, individual Baha'is are now openly appealing to officials for an end to the government-backed oppression, which in recent weeks has escalated.

Examples of this escalation abound. Recently, a high-ranking official decreed that a Baha'i widow had no right to keep her children or to receive her rightful share of her husband's pension. In the town of Ardikan, near Yazd, Baha'i homes have been confiscated and looted, the furniture dragged into the streets and put up for public auction. In Shiraz, scores of Baha'is have been dismissed from their jobs or deprived of their business and trade licenses, adding to the hundreds of Baha'is already prevented from working. Also in Shiraz, dozens of Baha'is bank accounts have been frozen. According to Tansik, these events are part of the Iranian government's plan to eliminate the Baha'i Faith from the land of its birth.
