PSU HAS A NEW DR. JONES: SHE'S DR. DIANE JONES

Dr. Dianne Jones

PEMBROKE--Pembroke State University has a new Dr. Jones.

She is Dr. Diane Jones, daughter-in-law of the late Dr. English E. Jones, former chancellor of Pembroke State University. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. David Earl Oxendine of Pembroke.

Director of career planning and placement at Pembroke State University since 1977, she has completed work on her dissertation and defended it March 28. The formality of receiving the doctorate will take place at N.C. State University's commencement exercises May 4.

Dr. Jones will receive an Ed.D. in Adult and Community College Education from N.C. State University.

Her dissertation was on: The Status of Male and Female Administrators in Institutions of the N.C. Community College System: A Comparative Analysis."

She did the course work for her doctorate at N.C. State from 1974-77 when she was not employed at PSU. "I took a very light load at that time during the week, then did my housework on weekends," said Dr. Jones, the wife of Randell Jones, youngest son of Dr. English Jones. She worked on her doctorate independently, doing research through the libraries of Pembroke State and N.C. State University.

"To obtain data about the N.C. Community College System, I sent out questionnaires and had a fine 86 percent response," said Dr. Jones.

How does it feel to complete work on this doctorate which began some nine years ago? "A feeling of accomplishment--but I'm glad it's over," smiled Dr. Jones. "I feel I can now sit down and enjoy a book." But she plans to continue expanding her education by taking courses in computer science.

As for career advancement, she feels a terminal degree is very important. "I'm interested in student affairs and student placement work. I'd also like to do some writing, publishing material from my dissertation," she said.

Mother of a five-year-old son, Channing, Dianne is expecting her second child in June.
