

Jesse's Record

Gasoline taxes have been sky-rocketing for a long time now — as any working man or woman can tell you.

When the five cents per gallon gas tax increase was being debated in the Senate, Jesse worked hard day and night to defeat it. Almost singlehandedly he fought to keep your gas prices and your taxes lower.

SPENCER "The Warrior" CHAVIS

Spencer Chavis, a Lumbee Indian, the son of Ted and Shirley Chavis of Dearborn Heights, Michigan, has been chosen to be the Grand Marshal of the Lumbee Homecoming Parade.

"This is quite an honor, and I will be very proud to represent the Lumbees," says Chavis. "I am very proud to be a Lumbee Indian and by the time I am ready for a championship fight, everyone will know that I am the Lumbee Warriors."

As an amateur, Spencer had an impressive record of 87-5, 66 knock-outs and won a national title, the 1981 Silver Glove Champion.

Professionally he has compiled a perfect 7-0 record, 4 knock outs.

Large promoters want him on their fight cards because he is such a crowd pleaser. It is very impressive to see him come into the ring with a full war bonnet, and knee high moccasins. The crowds cheer, "Warrior, Warrior." He has a very large group of fans who go to all his fights and cheer him on. They all wear red and black shirts with "Chavis the Warrior" on them.

"What makes this 185 pound, 6'4" professional puncher so successful is his confidence," says his manager and cousin Fred Chavis. "He has such an overwhelming desire to excel in the ring that he feels he can pound his opponents to the canvas every time out. I am very pleased with his progress and know that he has all the potential and talent, but most important he has heart."

Spencer is a 1983 graduate of Annapolis High School. "Now that I am out of school, I want to devote all my time to my boxing career," says Chavis. "I want to grow and develop both mentally and physically. In the next five years I should be at my peak. I have started to train at a new gym, one that I believe is the finest facility in the state of Michigan. I am going to work on improving my boxing skills in a scientific manner.

"My goal is to be the youngest Indian Heavyweight Champion of the World."
