

"The heart has its reasons which reason knows nothing of."
Blaise Pascal

A massive star has a shorter life span than a less massive star because it must burn its fuel faster in order to keep from collapsing.

One of the first lamps was a wick dipped in grease. The holder was made of stone.
"Ruling is easy, governing difficult."
Goethe

"Advice is least heeded when most needed."
English Proverb

WINNERS & LOSERS

The U.S. is really a winner when it comes to the Olympics. Since the inauguration of the modern Games in 1896, the United States has produced 998 gold medalists who have earned 1,978 gold medals in the games. No other country has earned as many coveted Olympic gold medals as has the U.S.

Now, any American can hold Olympic gold. For the first time, the U.S. Mint is issuing Olympic commemorative coins—and for the first time in over 50 years, one of those coins will be of gold. The coins are being sold to raise money to support our Olympic teams to help add to our gold medal collection at the 1984 Olympiad in Los Angeles.

For a free brochure and order form, you can write to the Bureau of the Mint, 55 Mint Street, San Francisco, CA 94175.
