is ultimately provided back to all swine producers in Robeson County.

The information which is obtained from each carcass includes back fat measurements in three locations, the carcass length, and the loin eye is measured to determine the square inches of the lean section of the loin. Additionally, the overall lean cut percent is determined, and carcass placings are determined.

This year Mack Johnson of Route 2, Lumberton, had the grand champion carcass which had a lean cut percent of 62.05. This lean cut percent includes hams, loins, and shoulders. William Dial had the second place hog which came in at 59.57 percent. Other placings included William C. Sampson in third at 58.43 percent; Tina Dial, fourth, 57.44 percent; Carol Dial, fifth, 56.79 percent; Anthony Locklear, sixth, 53.68 percent; Jeffery Maynor, seventh, 52.74 percent; Lucy Maynor, eighth, 52.20 percent; Martha Maynor, ninth, 52.12 percent; and Maurice Locklear, tenth, at 51.82 percent lean cuts.

Practically all of the carcasses were relatively long with the champion coming in at 32.8 inches and Lucy Maynor's porker having the longest carcass at 33.5 inches.

I was especially impressed with the loin eye measurements this year, especially since we consistently had small loin eyes in the first few years following the inception of the carcass show. This year, however, saw practically every loin eye at over 5 square inches and the largest loin eye at 7.6 square inches. For those who may be trying to interpret these figures, I believe that most housewives would be very happy to buy pork chops with a five square inch loin eye and those individuals purchasing pork chops with a 7.6 square inch loin eye would be nothing less than ecstatic with their
