PSU RECEIVES $500,000 GRANT FROM NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF HEALTH

Pembroke State University has received a $500,000 grant over a five-year period from the National Institute of Health to encourage its students to enter research careers in the biomedical sciences.

PSU's top students in biology or chemistry will have the opportunity to apply for trainee expenses under the grant, which will pay them $341 a month tax-free plus tuition and fees during a 24-month period they are involved in the program.

Confirmation of the grant came from Edward Bynum, director of MARC (Minority Access to Research Careers).

The plan is to select four students for the program this year: two seniors and two juniors. Thereafter, PSU will select six students for each of the next four years. In future instances, the students will be mostly sophomores and juniors.

Pembroke State was chosen because of its "history of commitment to minority students," said Dr. David Maxwell, professor of biology who wrote the grant proposal. However, students of all races should apply immediately to Maxwell for consideration to enter the program, he said.

"A student should have at least a 3.0 grade point average in biology or chemistry," said Maxwell.

Whereas half of the grant will go for trainee expenses, etc., the remainder will be for equipment and resource material for PSU plus faculty salaries, said Maxwell. "The equipment will be for both research and teaching," he noted. "There will also be funds for speakers and library resources."

The ideal situation would be for a student to spend the summer of his sophomore year in the specially designed curriculum which would prepare him to enter the research program. During the summer of his junior year he would study at a research institution under a special arrangement between PSU and that school. "After graduation, these students will be highly sought after by graduate schools," claimed Maxwell.

"The benefits to our campus will be many," said Maxwell. "It will stimulate everyone, making us even more academic and challenging--and broadening our scope." He said Dr. Leon Rand, vice chancellor for academic affairs who helped to obtain the grant, is "very supportive and enthusiastic about the program."

"It's the biggest grant we've received in our department of study in my 17 years at Pembroke State," added Maxwell.

800 ATTEND WINSTON-SALEM MEETING

Each of the seven regions of North Carolina is showing a multi-media slide presentation about the services rendered by the 16-campus UNC system, of which Pembroke State is one.

The first presentation drew a capacity crowd of 800 people to the Benton Convention Center in downtown Winston-Salem Oct. 10. A delicious buffet preceded the slide showing. The presentation, with marvelous pictorial and sound effects, was outstanding--and PSU was one of the campuses featured.

Representing PSU at the presentation were Chancellor Paul Givens, who was introduced to the crowd along with the other UNC system chancellors; Dr. Ray Pennington, PSU athletic director; and Gene Warren, PSU public information director who is working with the other 15 campuses on the presentation.

Keep Nov. 29 underlined on your calendar--because the slide presentation will be shown that evening at Wilmington.

200 STUDENTS HEAR STREATER

Steve Streater, former UNC football player who is state coordinator of Students Against Driving Drunk (SADD), attracted over 200 students last Thursday in a talk at PSU during "Alcohol Awareness Week." The previous night Judge Herbert Richardson of Lumberton had the same kind of response.

Jan Lowery, health careers coordinator of PSU, said that Streater stated "Robeson County ranked 10th among North Carolina counties in '83 in the number of DWI (drinking while impaired) arrests" and that Cumberland County was "second or third" and Onslow County was high. Streater, who was paralyzed from the chest down in '81 because of an automobile accident, showed a 20-minute slide presentation during his talk.

He suggested that if students feel they must drink, they "designate a friend to drive, spend the night, or walk home."

The National Highway Safety Administration and National Safety Council have reported that "alcohol-related accidents are No. 1 health problem of teenagers."

This year Steve carried the Olympic torch for one kilometer and considers this one of his highest honors.

'MISS N.C.' SPEAKS AT PSU

Francesca Adler, "Miss North Carolina," returns to the Pembroke State University campus Wednesday, Oct. 24, for a noon talk in Old Main's Native American Resource Center. It will be part of PSU's "Success Sharing Series," sponsored by the PSU Office of Career Planning and Placement. Everyone is invited--especially students, faculty and staff.

JUDY SARVIS IS LUCKY WINNER

Judy Sarvis, director of student activities at PSU, was a lucky young woman at a recent drawing containing names of all season subscribers to events to Pembroke State's Performing Arts Center.

She was the winner of a theatre trip for two to Atlanta, sponsored by the Performing Arts Center.

Unfortunately, Judy was unable to go on the three-day excursion and gave the tickets to her mother as a birthday gift. The trip this weekend includes roundtrip transportation, double occupancy hotel accommodations, theatre tickets to the Alliance and Academy theatres, shopping at Lenox Square, plus hotel taxes, tips and gratuities.
