The annual Christmas Craft Show and Sale that is sponsored by the Robeson County Extension Homemakers organization and coordinated by the Extension Service will be held Friday, November 9, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the O.P. Owens auditorium in Lumberton. The Christmas show has been conducted for several years, and the array of items that are available for sale is quite extensive.

Even though the primary focus of the show is on Christmas crafts, I believe that anyone who attends will find that the major feature of the show is having the opportunity to purchase local handmade items which can serve quite nicely as Christmas gifts. In addition to the usual Christmas decorations, items such as ceramics, shuck and oak slat basketry, wood carvings, creative stitchery, plus home-baked breads, cookies, cakes, and candies will be very much in evidence throughout the day of the show. Naturally, everyone is invited to attend, but those persons who would like to reserve spaces for participation in the show should contact the County Extension Office at 738-8111 immediately.

TOBACCO SITUATION-- Much has been said and written about tobacco and the overall oversupply situation that exists. Yet, while little new information has been available, as this column was being developed, new initiatives were being announced which may help to move excess tobacco into trade channels. Based on the continuous dialogue that we have with individuals in leadership capacities throughout the tobacco-growing areas, even though we are in perhaps the most precarious period that tobacco has faced in many years, it appears that many positive moves are being made or suggested which may ultimately help to strengthen the tobacco program. Certainly no one appears to have the total answer to the problem, but there sure is lots of effort being made to ferret out ideas and to make sure that those ideas are examined very closely prior to being discarded, regardless as to how ridiculous they may sound initially.

While stabilization had sold slightly over 30 million pounds of inventory through September of this year, receipts from the 1984 crop were running slightly greater than last year's receipts, which amounted to about 190 million pounds; thus continuing to add to the already difficult situation. As would be expected, we are getting lots of calls from farm owners who wish to lease out their total farms, including the tobacco. Considering the unsettled situation that currently exists, there is little substantive advice that we can provide regarding the tobacco situation except to try to make everyone aware that it appears that significant change in the overall tobacco situation is imminent and to remain flexible. All persons involved in decision making should stay informed in order to make the necessary and appropriate responses to those changes which may be more positive than some expect, but certainly less palatable to others than they would desire. Naturally, anyone who may need guidance or specific information on overall land rent determination or leasing is encouraged to call the Extension Office at 738-8111. Additionally, since so much opinion exists regarding the tobacco situation, we encourage farmers and others to take a few minutes to write to leaders of tobacco groups, associations, government policy makers, or others to suggest changes or make recommendations that are felt will work. Addresses for these groups, associations, or others are maintained at the Extension Office.

Robeson County Sheriff Endorses Hunt

Declaring that Governor Hunt has helped "turn the tide of crime in North Carolina," Robeson County Sheriff Hubert Stone announced today that he supports Jim Hunt in the hotly-contested U.S. Senate race.

"I have worked closely with our Governor fighting crime in Robeson County and across the state," Stone said. "Since he took office, Governor Hunt has set up harsh penalties for drug traffickers and armed robbers, created a statewide network of Community Watch programs to curb rural crime, passed the DWI law to get the drunk drivers off the roads, sped up the prosecution of felony cases and passed tough sentencing reforms."

"I can't recall another governor as hard-nosed as Jim Hunt when it comes to cracking down on crime," Stone said. "Working together with sheriffs and law officers across North Carolina, he has taken on the robbers, the drug pushers and the drunk drivers--and he's won." Stone cited studies which show that between 1980 and 1982 crime in North Carolina dropped by almost 1.5%. In 1983, it fell another 8% and in the first six months of 1984, crime is 5% lower than it was in the first half of 1983.

"Fighting crime is mainly the job of communities and states--folks like me work at it every day a week. But we need national leadership to help us out," he said. "Jim Hunt took a hard line against criminals as Governor, and he'll take that same no-nonsense approach to Washington."

"He'll crack down on drug abuse and drug pushers just like he has done in North Carolina. He'll fight to reform the insanity defense that criminals like John Hinckley have used to their advantage. He'll take serious steps to address the problem of juvenile crime and he will continue his tradition of getting tough with law breakers and thugs who think they can take advantage of the people in this country."

Stone is a member of the statewide Sheriffs for Hunt Committee, which is made up of sheriffs from across North Carolina who believe Jim Hunt will provide the kind of strong national leadership it takes to crack down on crime in America.

Two of Hunt's other major accomplishments as Governor include the creation of the cabinet-level Department of Crime Control and Public Safety to coordinate state efforts to fight crime with local sheriffs' offices and law enforcement agencies; and the institution of the Governor's Special Message on Crime, which he delivered to each session of the N.C. General Assembly.
