"No" to Changing PSU's Name

To the Editor:
Changing the name from Pembroke State University to the University of North Carolina at Pembroke, is not the answer to greater success in the field of meeting the world head on. Truth of the matter is it disturbs the local Trustees and those not so local to mention name Pembroke in reference to education.

Trustee Dennis Lowery of Charlotte, who made the motion to change names, chose to live elsewhere rather than seek to improve or promote a better educational program in his home town.
Trustee Ira Pate Lowry of Pembroke, served as band director at PSU for several years and all the time was hoping they would change the name.

Trustee Burlin Lowry of Cary helped with the "we don't like the name PSU campaign." There are 13 members on the PSU Board of Trustees and it is disturbing to know that 5 of them are Indian and they fell for Paul Givens' story that he is asked where ever he travels if PSU is a private college.

The truth of the matter is, Paul Givens, the Trustees, the alumni and the faculty, have failed to advertise the finished product being turned out at PSU. Changing the name of the institution will not improve the product quality. As for the notoriety attributed to Pembroke, NC no one has to be told where it is in the original 48. I can almost hear Paul Givens say to these people who he claims have asked him where PSU is located that it is on the north side of the seaboard railroad tracks about half way between Wilmington and Charlotte.

One of the Lowery's (Trustee) said a degree from a university carries a lot of clout. Richard Millhouse Nixon attended Duke University which has lots of clout. Richard Millhouse Nixon was just smart enough to get caught and had to resign the Presidency after demeaning the office of the Presidency and losing face with the free world. Is this the kind of clout Lowery is talking about?

better at PSU as Paul Givens says it is, why is it so necessary to change the name of the producer? More double talk from Paul Givens as I see it.

I am asking all of the people who are concerned and still have your sanity to let these Trustees of PSU and Paul Givens and William Friday of UNC and the UNC Board of Governors know that this entire episode is totally ridiculous and that you prefer the name changing of PSU cease and desist.

Writer says, "Vote our Consciences!"

Dear Editor:

I am a concerned North Carolinian.

We are about to make some terribly important decisions at the polls on November 6. Most politicians would have you believe that these are races between the Democrats and the Republicans, but I don't believe they are that at all. In the top level races, both state and national, this election is a decision between liberal thought and traditional or conservative, thought.

In general, the liberals of our day are pushing for higher taxes as a way to reduce deficits, more centralized government controls and, consequently, more interference in the private lives of people and more promises of government give away programs that cost a lot of taxpayers' money but don't ever seem to accomplish what they're supposed to.

On the other hand, in general, the conservatives want less spending as a way to reduce deficits, smaller government, lower taxes, less interference in the lives of people and greater emphasis on self-reliance on the part of the individual. These latter ones are the Constitutional principles which made our country great and are, I believe, the only principles that will keep us great.

Which set of principles do you choose? The choice has never been so clear. These issues are so critical to the future of our great nation and to succeeding generations of our children and grandchildren that I believe our choice should override all party considerations of Democratic vs. Republican. Our choice needs to be on the basis of which set of principles is right and best.

We shouldn't hang on a party label. We should now, of all times, vote our consciences!

Sincerely,
W.D. Stedman

Fellowships

Available

UNIVERSITY PARK, PA.-- Graduate fellowships are available for American Indian students to enroll in the special education teacher training program at The Pennsylvania State University.

The American Indian Special Education Teacher Training Program was established in 1983 with a three-year grant from the U.S. Department of Education. Participants receive a monthly stipend of about $600 plus travel expenses and a remission of tuition.

Dr. Anna Gajar, associate professor of special education, is director of the program, which is affiliated with the University's nationally recognized Native American Program.

Dr. Gajar says, "The teacher training program is designed to prepare American Indian students to work with handicapped American Indian children." Special seminars on American Indian Education are conducted in conjunction with the Native American Program.

Graduates of the program are qualified for the following employment opportunities: (a) Teacher of Special Education, (b) Special Education Program Coordinator and Consultant, (c) Special Education Program Developer, and (d) Special Education positions with the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Applications for Spring Semester, beginning January 1985, are now being accepted. Participants will receive the master of education degree in special education. Depending on applicant qualifications, study will involve a one-year course commitment.

For more information, write Dr. Anna Gajar, American Indian Special Education Teacher Training Program, The Pennsylvania State University, 226B Moore Building, University Park, Pa. 16802 or call the program office (814) 863-2284.

Halloween's bite is tooth decay

Candies and sweets — Children love them. Halloween offers them. But tooth decay is on the way unless we ensure vital care for our children's teeth and gums. Teach your kids to brush at least once a day.

Limit the "bad guys," like candy, jelly, and sweet things. Good foods, like milk, and fruits, are excellent sources of nutrients for healthy teeth and gums. Good eating habits are as important as good dental habits.

Proper brushing, diet, and periodic check-ups make healthy, happy children... P.S. - Don't let the "sweets" from Halloween bite into your children's teeth!

The People's Lawyer

"The issues I know about and care about are the issues the Attorney General can do the most about. That's why I want to be the lawyer for the people of North Carolina."

Open Government

"In my campaign, every meeting, every file and every ledger is open to the public. And in the same spirit, as Attorney General, I will work to make sure the doors of state government are open to everyone."

Consumer Protection

"I will fight unfair increases in utility rates. By intervening in rate cases, I will make sure the Utility Commission hears all the facts. And, I will make sure it hears the concerns of the consumers."

I will work aggressively to protect North Carolina consumers from unfair and dishonest trade practices, and to protect our businessmen and women from dishonest and unethical competition."

Helping Victims of Crime

"We need a comprehensive Victim's Bill of Rights. Those who are injured as a result of crime deserve full compensation from those who have injured them."

We can protect people from becoming victims by improving our court system. I will propose specific changes to make our courts more efficient. Swift, fair justice is the greatest deterrent to crime."
