Fun In Sports

Negative attitudes on the part of administrators is the chief cause of much of the apparent cut down of sports programs in the colleges and public schools. "They don't need a football team, they don't need a swimming team, they don't need a gymnastics team, they don't need required two years of college physical education, they don't need intramurals for women, they don't need four years of high school physical education or swimming pools in any of our Robeson County high schools or in Lumberton." They don't need anything, they've got everything including drugs, pregnancies, alcohol, marijuana, uppers and downers, you name it, they've got it all, except people who really understand human nature and want these kids to have activities that are healthful because the opportunities to meet their needs are not there. However, the instinct for action is there. They are going to do something and it is self-destructive activities as listed above. It is a duty, not an option as most administrators think it is, to help preserve the health of all its students. Our society is suffering because leadership is lacking, not money. Winning has become the "slave morality" of administrators instead of service to its students in providing them with a healthful mental environment as well as a physical environment. I can't take my hat off to proposition 48 because it is "imposed morality," it thinks it can force study and better academics when in reality it blocks learning. The learning law effect takes place when kids see that they want a better life when they have opportunities to play, work and develop, through good rapport with their schools, faculty and administrators who will provide programs for them rather than take programs away from them. I have seen this right here in Pembroke. There is no fun in sports when winning with the privileged few in basketball is the priority. The colleges could do our society a great service if they would curtail professionalism and have a "total sports philosophy" rather than the slave morality to winning at all costs, especially in the lives of its students. You might say, "it's all in the game." But it's a lousy game. Ken Johnson

St. Pauls Mother Conquers Adversity; One Of 32 Selected To Who's Who

Violet Reaves Barnhill is intent on keeping adversity at arms length. A college degree is that important. "I've come this far, I'm not about to give up," said Ms. Barnhill, who is expected to graduate from Robeson Technical College with an associate degree in secretarial-executive. "It'd have to have something to do with my kids before I'd drop out."

Ms. Barnhill, 34 and mother of three, hasn't exactly had it easy since enrolling at RTC in the winter of 1984. She's been through a divorce, her home was destroyed by fire last June and during Thanksgiving she underwent major surgery, returning to school just three days later.

"I wasn't suppose to come back to school until Jan. 2," she said. "But I'd missed the winter quarter and would have had to come back next year. It's hard, trying to go to school and take care of three children (ages 15, 7, and 5)."

Last week, Ms. Barnhill a native of St. Pauls, found out she had been one of 32 students at RTC selected to Who's Who Among Students in American Junior Colleges. "I was surprised, but it felt good, good to accomplish something," said Ms. Barnhill, who was the honorary chief marshal during last year's graduation.

Who's Who candidates are selected according to their academic achievement, service to the community, leadership in extracurricular activities and potential for continued success. Ms. Barnhill has a 3.98 grade point average based on a 4.0 grading scale. "I've had

Talent Contest

The search is on. The Student Government Association and the Alumni Association at Robeson Technical College have begun "recruiting entrants" for the first RTC Talent Search contest, scheduled for April 18 at the Carolina Civic Center. "We've been working with Student Services on the preliminary planning," said SGA President Yvonne Jacobs, a second-year accounting student. "Right now, we want to recruit people to try out for it; anyone with any kind of talent. We've started putting up posters." Participants have until Feb. 14 to sign for the talent search contest, which will recognize the top three finishers in two categories-students and alumni. First place will be worth $150, second place $100 and third place $50. A pre-screening rehearsal will be held March 11 with preliminary judging scheduled two days later to determine the contest's final participants. "Everybody is welcomed to try out," Ms. Jacobs said. "But we want the best talent available; that's the reason for the screening." Contestants participating in the "student category" must be enrolled in a curriculum program at the time of sign-up, try-out and performance. Those entering the "alumni program" must have graduated from a curriculum program or have been enrolled in a curriculum credit course. Those who have taken non-credit courses are also eligible. Five employees from the RTC staff and faculty will serve as preliminary judges and choose the final participants during a preview talent search scheduled on campus March 13. Five talented individuals will then be selected from the community to judge the talent show April 18. "We've already had a lot of people inquiring about the contest," Ms. Jacobs said. "It'll be first class and we hope it'll become an annual event."

PEMBROKE KIWANIS

"The most powerful vehicle of promotions in Pembroke is the Carolina Indian Voice," said Pete Jacobs, as he presented it's editor-Bruce Barton "After taking it for granted it has truly contributed to the college and town of Pembroke." Bruce, in speaking about the paper, cited it's accomplishments in helping to get rid of double voting, the founding of the PSU Boosters Club, the renewing of the Chamber of Commerce, the sending of Carnell Locklear to Hollywood, and now, the raising of $50,000 for the Indian Voice scholarship fund plus the preservation of the railroad depot. All of these accomplishments have been brought about through a remarkable spirit of love for his soon to be Alma Mater-Pembroke State University. Bruce will get his degree this year. And his love for his community, his people and fellow man. "To keep his paper going with many hours behind the scenes," as Pete Jacobs said in his introduction and also to get a college degree is truly an outstanding accomplishment and as Bruce feels, "It is due to his belief in God and his dedication to his fellow man." We Kiwanians are truly proud of Bruce and hope he continues with the Indian Voice for many years to come. But he feels as he said, "It needs to go another direction." However, he has not come to a decision yet. We sincerely hope he stays as no one can take his place. Buddy Bell is our newest member and he received his membership pin from his wife Sarah. He was presented to the club by Bill Oxendine. President Wade Hunt attended the Carolina Kiwanis Convention in Spartanburg this past weekend and was very pleased with its presentation of this year's theme of "walk with a child." Dexter Brooks conducted a "mini fund raiser," won by Bill Oxendine. Presiding-President Wade Hunt, Invocation-Reggie Strickland, Song Leader Ed Teets, Reporter- Ken Johnson. The meeting was held Tuesday evening at the Town and Country Restaurant.

An Interview on . . .

FACIAL PAIN

DOCTOR OF CHIROPRACTIC

. . . With Dr. Harvey C. Schultz, Jr.

Consider the following situation: A young lady visits the Schultz Chiropractic Center and complains to Dr. Schultz, D.C., that for about three weeks she has had a slight pain over one eye.

After examining the patient thoroughly, Dr. Schultz commences treatment and asks her to return the following day. When she comes in for her second appointment, she announces, "I don't know what you did, but I find that I am completely relaxed again. . . you know, not jittery and nervous. . . and the pain is gone!"

We asked Dr. Schultz to explain such a dramatic change in temperament and attitude. And for that matter, what this problem is.

"The trouble is a low grade irritation of what --because it has three branches -- is known as the trigeminal nerve," Dr. Schultz said. "It's the nerve that is involved in what is generally known as facial neuritis."

Dr. Schultz notes that often when face pain is complained of he can examine the patient and find abnormally tender points on all three branches of the trigeminal nerve even though a patient may be unaware that one or two of the branches are affected. In the example above it's probable that the branch which is connected to the nerves above the eye would be irritated to the extent to make the patient aware of the pain.

"As for the rapid change in the pain and anguish, I might say that this is possible when action is taken on the trouble as soon as it is noticed. That would account for the dramatic results from the treatment," says Dr. Schultz.

"Had the hypothetical young lady waited until she had acute facial neuritis," he continued, "the treatment, of course, would not have produced such startling results."

Dr. Schultz notes that it is not unusual for persons to wait for "little hurts" to go away. "Unfortunately," an individual typically figures isolated pain points are not too important. They take a pain pill and forget about it. I'd like to think it's needless to say that these little irritations are going to return and return until a serious problem develops," he states.

The point is that nerve irritations are caused. "That's the key word," according to Dr. Schultz. "They just don't happen. And the only avenue to correction is to find that cause. And until it's found, there will be nervous irritability that this woman suffered."

The good Doctor also reminds that "little pain is the easy way out. I mean," Dr. Schultz, "take notice of nature's DEW system. . . that's Distance Early Warning. It can save a lifetime of misery of long drawn-out treatment and care.
