New History of PSU Now Available

by Gene Warren

Pembroke--With its gray-and-maroon cover featuring a picture of Old Main, PSU's campus landmark, a new soft-cover history of PSU is now available for purchase. Its title: "Pembroke State University: A Centennial History." The 110-page publication, which includes 40 black-and-white pictures, was printed by Brentwood University Press of Columbus, Ga.

The book's co-authors are Dr. David Eliades, PSU Professor of history, and Linda Oxendine, on leave as director of PSU's Native American Resource Center. Ms. Oxendine is working on her doctorate at the University of Minnesota.

One thousand of this soft-cover edition were printed. They sell for $9.40 each, including tax, and can be purchased at the PSU Book Store or the PSU Native American Resource Center. To order by mail, include an additional $1.50 for shipping and handling. One hundred copies of the book in hard-cover edition will soon arrive.

Eliades and Oxendine worked for two years in gathering material and writing the book. They utilized public records, manuscripts, interviews, books, articles, newspaper stories and unpublished studies.

"We believe the final product is very readable," said Eliades, who in 1975 was also co-author of a history of the Lumbee Indians entitled: "The Only Land I Know." The other co-author of the 1975 book was Dr. Adolph Dial, chairman of the PSU American Indian Studies Department.

Included in the new history is Hamilton McMillan's handwritten copy of the legislation creating the Croatan Normal School in 1887. McMillan was a state legislator from Red Springs whose bill began the Normal School which evolved into PSU.

The book also includes in its appendix the names of all members of the PSU Board of Trustees from 1887-1985. Also listed are all heads of the institution and the years they served.

This new history has six chapters. The title of each is: Chapter 1, "Introduction: PSU Today"; Chapter 2, "The Foundation Is Laid, 1887-1909"; Chapter 3, "The Normal School Comes of Age, 1909-29"; Chapter 4, "A Generation of Growth and Change, 1929-62"; Chapter 5, "An Era of Progress and Turmoil, 1962-79"; and Chapter 6, "A Goal of Excellence, 1979-85."

DR. DAVID ELIADES displays a newly printed copy of a centennial history of PSU which he co-authored with LINDA OXENDINE, who is on leave of absence from PSU. The book is on sale for $9.40, including tax, and can be purchased at the PSU Book Store or the PSU Native American Resource Center.

'Spikes' Can Damage Home Electronics

Consumers should be aware that electrical voltage "spikes" can seriously damage personal computers, and other sophisticated home electronic equipment, a local electric official said. Ronnie Hunt, general manager of Lumbee River Electric Membership Corporation, urged consumers to protect their costly electronic gear against the danger.

Voltage spikes, sudden extreme power surges that may be caused by lightning and disturbances on distribution lines, may last only a few millionths of a second. But in that short time, they can wipe out computer memories, stop programs, or damage the equipment, Hunt said. He warned that integrated circuits in television sets, video cassette recorders, and microwave ovens also are vulnerable to spike damage.

"The first line of defense," Hunt said, "is properly grounded wiring which warrants on many appliances require. However, the safest bet for computers and other sensitive electronic equipment is to install relatively inexpensive voltage spike protectors."

Voltage spike protectors are simple plug-in devices similar to adaptor plugs which sell for approximately $10 to $20. Although more sophisticated and costly protective devices can be purchased, Hunt said, spike protectors are generally adequate for most home equipment. He urged consumers to check with electronic dealers to determine the type of protective device best suited to their needs.

Native American Resource Center Seeks Community Involvement

The Native American Resource Center, often called "the Museum" in Old Main (PSU), is looking for members of the community who are interested in Indian issues. These issues include Indian education; preservation of Indian culture and heritage; archaeology as a way to learn about Indian culture; Indian health concerns; American Indian Studies in general; and any other Indian-related issues. Anyone who wants to participate at any level in discussion of these issues, or in activities related to these issues, can contact Dr. Stanley Knick at 521-4214 (extension 282).

Old Main, and the Native American Resource Center, are living symbols of Indian culture in this area, Dr. Knick stated. "Our approach is not one that sees Indian culture as something dead and gone, but rather as something alive and present. Sure enough, Indian culture has a prominent place in local history. But Indian culture can also be a vital force in the future of Robeson County and the State of North Carolina. What it takes is people, in every walk of life, who are willing to take an active part in the on-going process of preserving Indian heritage, the on-going process of expressing Indian concerns."

Dr. Knick continued, "Currently we are working toward the Celebration Festival of American Indian Arts and Culture to be held on the PSU campus November 7, 8 and 9. If you have ideas or suggestions about how you, your organization, church, or other group could be involved in this important festival, let us know. But if there are other Indian issues or concerns which you think ought to be expressed, we want to hear about those, too."

"The Native American Resource Center is not just a museum. It is a Resource Center. This means that it is a place for exchange of all kinds of resources: educational, cultural, community, human. Join us in the exchange process--the community and the Native American Resource Center will both reap the benefits."

Harrelson Camp Receives Endorsements

Wilmington, NC--Support for the Harrelson for Congress campaign continues to grow as three groups: Americans for Constitutional Action (ACA), American Federation of Small Businesses (AFSB), and the Native American Action Committee (NAAC) have publicly endorsed Tommy Harrelson as the next congressman of the 7th Congressional District.

In a written statement to the campaign, Charlene B. Cracycraft, chairman of the ACA, stated that "We endorse you (Harrelson) because you are a highly qualified individual whose civic and business achievements indicate you will fight courageously to preserve our Constitutional form of government." A trustee for the ACA is the Honorable Alton Lennon, former Democratic congressman of the 7th District.

On October 11th, the Native American Action Committee headquartered in Lumberton endorsed the Harrelson race. "It is with great pride that we lend our support to the Harrelson race," stated Brawleigh Graham, chairman of the group. "Tommy Harrelson has given us the help we need in fighting the GSX plant and keeping it out of this area. We need jobs and opportunity and Tommy Harrelson can bring us jobs and opportunity," he said. Graham stated that his group of over 150 Native Americans will begin contacting thousands of Native Americans throughout Robeson County on Harrelson's behalf.

The American Federation of Small Businesses is backing Harrelson's race because of Harrelson's commitment to President Reagan's agenda for a strong national defense, deregulation of business, reduction of federal spending, and cutting taxes on productive enterprises.

Responding to the endorsements, Harrelson stated that it is another indication that support is swinging his way in the crucial last weeks of the election. "I am very pleased that these groups are backing my candidacy. These are all well respected organizations," he said.

"With the help of these groups and my Democrat, Independent and Republican support, I will be the next Congressman of the 7th District," Harrelson stated.

County offices get new phone system

From staff reports

Robeson County governmental offices were converted to Southern Bell's Essex telephone system Monday which means new numbers for half the county offices.

The new system will allow county employees to transfer calls between most departments. James Martin, county manager said. It includes intercom calling and three-way conference calling.

He said the new system will also save the county about $17,000 in telephone expenses over the next five years.

"The system will provide the public with faster and more direct access to our individual departments," said Martin.

Included in the change will be the Recreation and Parks Commission, the Board of Elections, Emergency Services, the Veteran's Service Office, the Robeson County Jail and the jail annex and the county garage.

All numbers designated for emergency service will still be in service. There is a new direct number added to handle the Sheriff's Department Administrative calls, which is 671-3104.

New numbers can be obtained by dialing the old number and listening to a tape recorded message, which will be available for one year following the changeover. The numbers also will be published in the new Southern Bell Directory.

Some county numbers will not change. These include all departments located in the governmental complex on Maxton Road.
