Drop-Out Prevention Month Observed at PJH

As proclaimed by Governor James Martin, the month of December was observed as drop-out prevention month for all North Carolina public schools.
 Pembroke Junior High held a series of activities relating to drop-out prevention during the month of December, according to Principal Bill James Brewington.

 On December 17, 1986 two juvenile court counselors, Mr. James F. Maynor and Mr. Eric Collins, discussed the need to stay in school. Mr. Early Maynor, retired educator, gave statistics of the state drop-out rate in North Carolina which ranks 37th among all states. These presentations were made to several hundred students at the school.
 The English Department under the direction of Ms.

Mary Helen Hinson, asked English teachers to assign essays to their classes entitled "The Need to Stay in School." Top essays were presented by Nicole Locklear, Timmy Locklear, Julie Crane, Leslie Lowery, Sean L. Chavis, David B. Oxendine and Robbie Revels. Other activities following this same theme were bulletin displays in the classrooms and in the locker room.
 Coordinator for the overall events was Mr. Ken Maynor, Job Placement/Drop-Out Prevention Counselor.
