"On Being Synoptic"

"It means looking at two sides of a problem and coming up with a solution of that problem. The wisdom is to get the correct answer. As our founding fathers believed democracy in government is the best form of solving problems as it gives all an equal chance to be heard. The vote is a real privilege in freedom of choice as contrasted to the slave ethic of dictatorships.

A consensus for truth in other words is the goal. So searching for the truth then should be the riding concern for all concerned in the Cultural Indian Center Squabble. It doesn't come without compromise one way or the other, if you want support. Trying to "bull-doze" one way or the other is simply "not recognizing the rights" of your fellow man. Further more the three ethics involved are 1. The Slave ethic. 2. The Situational ethic. 3. The Selective ethic.

The Slave ethic, "You do as I say or else." "The Situational ethic, We don't give a dam about you, we don't love you because you play golf. It's like the unloving parent beating on his kids. Just hate." "The third ethic has love for your fellow man and you will support him. So compromise is the only answer in this "all taxpayers interest." K.J.

PEMBROKE STATE'S NEW COUNSELING PROGRAM FEATURED IN NATIONAL PUBLICATION

The October issue of "Guidepost," a national publication of the American Counseling Association, based in Alexandria, Va., features Pembroke State University's new Master of Arts in School Counseling program.

An article by Andrew Backover, senior staff writer for "Guidepost", carries a headline in the 47-page newspaper which says: "Pembroke State Launches Counselor Education Program."

The article carries a photograph of Dr. Marie Faubert, who was hired for this fall semester as a full-time assistant professor for the program. She is a native of Boston with an Ed.D. from N.C. State University, conferred last May.

Dr. Ray Beatty, who is the coordinator of the new program, says Faubert brings "a lot of expertise in multi-cultural counseling" to the program. He says she was hired specifically for the new program.

Therefore, says the article, "counselors in the county had to travel a minimum of 100 miles to reach the nearest (public university) Master's level counselor education program, an unworkable situation for a part-time student who had a job. But thanks to the newly established counselor education program at PSU, located in the heart of Robeson (County) counselors in the county now can focus on the problems while developing the skills to help solve them."

The article states that PSU was approved to establish the new program "Within the university's Psychology Department" and was "inundated with 300 inquiries about admission shortly thereafter." (Latest figures are that 64 students are taking courses in the program this fall, while 25 others are preparing to enter the program).

The article quotes PSU Chancellor Joseph Oxendine as saying the new school counseling program will help promote PSU's mission "to affirm the unique strength of its culturally diverse student body, community, and region."

Beatty is quoted as saying, "We are serving an under-served part of the state," and adds, "There's definitely a need for more counselors in schools and agencies, and more will be hired." The new program is housed in the PSU Psychology Department, which pleases Beatty very much. The telephone of that department is: (919) 521-6240.

The "Guidepost" publication also carries a second article about PSU written by Beatty concerning the Kettering Foundation-sponsored National Issues Forum's "Moderator Training Institute" held during the past summer at PSU. Beatty says in his article that the words and goals of David Mathews, chief executive officer of NIF, are similar to those of Ted Remley, executive director of the American Counseling Association. All of this is wonderful publicity for Pembroke State University on a national scale.

DR. GARY WILLIS INVOLVED IN MANY ACTIVITIES

Dr. Gary Willis, associate professor in the PSU Department of Sociology, Social Work and Criminal Justice and coordinator of the latter, has been involved in many activities.

He was a participant in the Southeast Governor's Violence Summer at Charlotte where the results of the N.C. Violence Assessment Project, of which he was a term member, were presented.

Willis also gave the keynote address, entitled "Violent Crime and Families," at the annual conference of the N.C. Association of Court Counselors which was held at the N.C. Justice Academy in Salemburg. Willis has also been appointed to an Intensive Community-Based After-care Project "High Risk" Juvenile Parolees by the Administrative Offices of the Courts. He notes that Robeson County and the State of North Carolina have been selected as one of two sites on the East Coast to implement the Intensive After-care Program model.
