ROTC Program Has Informal Inspection

The color green most definitely prevailed as St. Patrick's Day was celebrated and the Jr. ROTC program of Purnell Sweet High School held its annual formal inspection Thursday, March 17.

Conducted by ROTC regional commanders from Fort Bragg, Major James H. Moore and Captain Charles R. Perry, every student in the program stood at attention and were carefully evaluated for military knowledge, first aid, proper dress, and neatness.

Several students of higher ROTC positions assisted to help maintain and prepare for the inspection. In order to develop prestigious training and knowledge of the military, PSHS's ROTC instructors request that students gain knowledge of the army and perform and execute responsibilities with dignity. One major form of instruction, is the training of leadership. Leadership roles have specific names or titles with various responsibilities and students are scrutinized carefully by the instructors to fulfill duties of the military; Julian Goodman, S1, or Staff 1, controls records, promotions, and administrations, Michael Hardin S2, is in charge of security, color guard, and merit system, Michelle L. Locklear, S5, is in charge of color guard and Publication, Jonie Ware, S3 handles the training, coordination, training schedules, and color guard, Felicia Hunt, S4, oversees equipment, issuing and receiving uniforms, and maintaining clothing records.

Those cadets of highest rank include Battalion Cadet Sgt. Major, Corey McInnis and battalion commander, Bridgette Woods whose jobs are to ensure that all responsibilities of the staff are taken care of. Instructors for the Jr. ROTC Program include Senior Honor instructor Augustine Vendetti, Command Sgt. Major Barney Razor, and First Sgt. Phillip Bynum.

Battalion Commander, Bridgette Woods, was presented with the first ROTC Region Commander's coin at the cadet commanders dinner at the Fort Bragg Officers Club March 10. Corey McInnis also attended.

An Open Letter to the Lumbee People from Arlinda Locklear, Tribal Attorney

During recent weeks, much has been written and said about the Lumbee recognition bill, the Lumbee Constitutional Assembly, and the impact of the work on the proposed tribal constitution on the recognition bill. As the attorney who represents the Lumbee Tribe before Congress on the Lumbee recognition bill, I'd like to express to you my view on these matters.

First, there is some confusion about who I represent on the Lumbee recognition bill. My client on the Lumbee recognition bill is and has always been the Lumbee Tribe. Until February 1994, the Lumbee Regional Development Association paid for my work on the tribe's behalf on the Lumbee bill. In February 1994, my contract with L.R.D.A. expired. Because of difference with L.R.D.A. over the tribe's right to adopt a tribal constitution, I have since told LRDA that I will not sign a new contract with them or take any fees from them. Neither will I sign a contract with or take any fees for work on the tribe's recognition bill from any other group or segment of the Lumbee Tribe. It is important that I remain loyal only to my client—the Lumbee Tribe. To do that, I can no longer contract with any one segment of the tribe. I assure you, though, that I will continue to represent the tribe on the Lumbee Recognition Bill to the best of my ability and will do whatever work is necessary to obtain passage of the bill.

Secondly, there have been reports about possible changes to the recognition bill. Some people associated with LRDA asked the sponsor of the Lumbee Bill, Congressman Charlie Rose, about changing the bill so that LRDA would be recognized as a temporary tribal government, pending the adoption of a constitution at some later date. As has been reported in the press, Mr. Rose advised that he opposed any amendments to the bill. In addition, one or more people associated with LRDA attempted to hire another lobbyist in Washington, D.C. for the same purpose. Apparently, LRDA has abandoned this effort. As a result, the Lumbee Tribe is now united behind passage of the Lumbee bill as presently written.

Thirdly, I have also volunteered my time to assist the Lumbee Constitutional Assembly in the drafting of a Lumbee tribal constitution. The Lumbee Recognition Bill requires that the tribe adopt a tribal constitution and the Bureau of Indian Affairs has advised that the sooner the tribe does so the better. In other words, there is no conflict of interest that prevents me from working on both the recognition bill and the adoption of a tribal constitution. In fact, I feel privileged to have been associated with the Lumbee Constitutional Assembly and will continue to assist them in any way possible. The Assembly has worked hard to draft a good Lumbee constitution, one that protects the best

In 1993, revenues for Hardee's operated by Flagstar were $682 million, and average restaurant sales were $1.26 million.

Flagstar, one of the nation's largest food service companies, had 1993 revenues of $4 billion. Based in Spartanburg, it owns and operates Denny's, Quincy's Family Steakhouse and El Pollo Loco restaurants and is the largest franchisee of Hardee's restaurants. Flagstar also provides contract food, vending and recreation.

Native American Mother and Daughter to Receive Degrees at NCCU Commencement

For Native Americans Barbara Brayboy and her daughter Jennifer Locklear, North Carolina Central University's commencement exercises on Saturday, May 14, will hold special significance.

The graduation ceremonies will be held in the O'Kelly-Riddick stadium beginning at 9 a.m.

Mrs. Locklear teaches kindergarten at the Marion Boyd School in Warrenton, and her mother, Mrs. Brayboy, for whom receiving the degree represents the culmination of 29 years of study, is a second grade teacher at the Hollister Elementary School in Halifax County.

Both women will receive their Master's degrees in Education.

Ms. Locklear, 24, has been teaching for five years. She came to NCCU to pursue her advanced degree following her graduation from Pembroke State in 1990.

She says that her experience at NCCU was extremely rewarding and that she plans one day to study for another advanced degree in educational administration.

"Being at NCCU has been a wonderful experience. The professors were excellent," she said. "I learned a lot about research and a whole lot about interacting with other people."

Both women said that their decision to attend NCCU came as a result of discussions they had with former NCCU students and others who spoke highly of the university's education department.

The fact that NCCU is a predominantly black school had little effect on their decision.

"Although NCCU is a predominantly black university, I don't feel that whites or Native Americans are treated any differently. It's been a totally positive experience for me," Mrs. Locklear said.

Mrs. Locklear's mother, Mrs. Brayboy, 50, also graduated from Pembroke State. She says that she will be elated when she and her daughter receive their degrees. The day, she says, will be one that she will not soon forget.

"The day will be very special for me because after 29 years I'll be getting my degree," she says. "It's something that I've always wanted and it's happening now."

To keep you informed on progress of the Lumbee recognition bill, I will write an open letter to the tribal membership from time to time. In addition, I would be happy to answer questions from any tribal member or Lumbee organization. I can be reached during business hours at (301) 473-5160, Post Office Box 605, Jefferson, Maryland 21755. Arlinda Locklear, Attorney at Law Washington, D.C.
