

The Coach's Corner

The Baseball Strike

George Will still blames the owners, but the point is the players association went on strike, not the owners. George Will is a very smart columnist, broadcaster, but it is beyond me why he thinks the salary cap should not be installed with free agency in effect. To me they still can bargain for those extremely high wages. The players have hurt others in the game besides themselves. The selfishness is so unethical on the part of the players, but it too is apparent on the part of the owners. The saddest part is the apparent destruction of the sport. But the average person cannot afford to pay the high ticket prices. Selfishness can destroy our freedom we have in our democracy. This strike is so out of line when you force the issue by striking. Unions can get out of line when they have unreasonableness in their demands as do the baseball players. Don't they owe something to the game?

with this cantaloupe? He gave it to the Editor of the Carolina Indian Voice who can witness that it was "really good." (Photo by Conner Brayboy)

Your Bible And You

by Dan Davis

Glorious indeed is the salvation offered in your Bible. Here are glad tidings of deliverance not only from the penalty of sin but also from its power. And the good news is for everybody, everywhere in every age.

Under no condition should you feel that you are left out, that this rich provision is not for you.

Your Bible says: "God our saviour... will have all men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth. For there is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus, who gave himself a ransom for all." (1 Timothy 2:3-6)

Over and over again this great truth is repeated.

Says the Apostle Paul to Titus: "The grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men." (Titus 2:11)

"We see Jesus," says the writer to the Hebrews, "who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death... that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man." (Hebrews 2:9)

He "delivered him up for us all," is Paul's message to the Romans (chapter 8:32), supplemented by the great declaration that "there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek, for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him: For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved." (Romans 10:12-13)

Dear reader, can you find yourself in these scriptures? God has sent His son, personally just for you! What wonder that your salvation was purchased at such a cost!

Cameron's Comment

By Paul Cameron

As far as I'm concerned, golf season ended with the PGA championship yet from now until Christmas there's a pro tourney each week somewhere in the world.

And hasn't golf become a true universal sport?

No matter the nationality, golfers have worldwide appeal.

Greg Norman, Nick Price, Seve Ballesteros—as the old TV commercial goes, when they speak, people listen.

My favorite golfers continue to be the old guard of masters. For their games and for their wit.

Sam Snead once said, "If a lot of people gripped a knife and fork like they do a golf club, they'd starve to death."

Jim Dempsey was known for his long tee shots. "I can airmail the golf ball but sometimes I don't put the right address on it."

When Lee Trevino was spotted washing windows at his home in Dallas, a passerby asked how much he charged for his services. "Lady, the woman in this house lets me sleep with her."

Chi Chi Rodriguez has played thousands of pro-am tournaments and notes, "For most amateurs, the best wood in the bag is the pencil."

From temperamental Tommy Bolt: "If you are going to throw a club, it is important to throw it ahead of you, down the fairway, so you don't waste energy going back to pick it up."

Although former Baltimore Orioles Manager Earl Weaver has used this line, the original credit goes to golfer's Mister X Miller Barber. "I don't say my golf game is bad, but if I grew tomatoes they'd come up sliced."

THE NEW TRIBAL COUNCIL

by Dr. Dean Chavers
Copyright, 1994

The responsibility of the new Tribal Chairman and the Tribal Council members is going to be awesome. Their responsibilities are something which has been troubling me for 20 years.

They have to relate to the federal government, that part is obvious. They have to relate to state government. They have to relate to local city and county government. And they have to relate to other tribes, which may not seem so obvious.

But in fact it is other tribes which have kept Lumbees from being recognized for over 20 years. When the National Congress of American Indians (NCAI) first voted on Congressman Rose's "Lumbee Bill" over 20 years ago, voting it down 55 to three, it was the other tribes which were the problem. At least they were a problem in the sense that they blocked something the Lumbee people really wanted.

Over the years I have listened to tribal leaders complain about Lumbees in public and in private. Their biggest complaint: Lumbees do not act like Indians. The second biggest complaint: Lumbees do not listen.

The failure to act like Indians is a serious charge, as far as relations with other tribes is concerned. It means the people making the charge are afraid the Lumbees are so assimilated that they will sell Indians out in exchange for a grant or a job.

Unfortunately, they have some real examples to cite as evidence. For every time we brag about the supposedly large number of Lumbees who are high federal officials, we hurt ourselves with the other tribes. They're jealous.

Every time we talk ignorantly about water rights, or Indian rights, or tribal sovereignty, we hurt ourselves with other tribes.

Every time we associate exclusively with urban Indians, we hurt ourselves with the other tribes. We have to make up our collective minds who we want to associate or affiliate with, and stick with that. In my book, it is the tribal governments, the leaders of sovereign tribes who are elected by their people to represent them who are our peers and affiliates.

The Lumbee Tribal Council needs to educate itself, or be educated, about the issues and concerns of Western Indian people in education, health, housing, child welfare, economic development, language preservation, water rights, land rights, fishing rights, and many other areas of concern to tribes. We don't want to keep repeating the same mistakes.

One time in an NCAI meeting, the chairman of another Eastern tribe took me aside. "What is all the concern with so-called Indian water rights?" he asked me.

"What they are concerned about is the Winters doctrine," I told him.

"What is that?" he said.

"The Winters doctrine is the Supreme Court case which gives Indians on reservations the right to waters which flow through the reservations," I told him.

"I still don't see what the problem is," he said. "Back home, all we have to do is dig a hole 20 feet and we have all the water we want."

Even though I explained to him that water is the cause for feuding, cussing, fighting, and gunfire in most of the West, he still did not get it. Even when I told him about a friend of mine in New Mexico who had to drill down 1500 feet to get water, he still did not get it.

If the Council is smart, they will get it. They will want to understand people from other tribes, and get along with them. We all need each other.
