Locklear Receives Access Awards

Anthony Locklear, an Assistant Dean in the College of Arts and Sciences at UNC-Chapel Hill, was a recent recipient of two awards at the University. The Access Award was presented to Mr. Locklear by the Learning Disabilities Services. The award was based on student recommendations and is awarded to individuals for supporting and encouraging the potential of LD students at UNC-CH. The UNC Class of 1996 sponsors the Excellence in Advising Award, a new award that was presented this year for the first time. Departmental advisors, faculty and professional school advisors are eligible for the award. The recipient of the Excellence in Advising Award receives a plaque presented by the Chancellor a check in the amount of $500.00 and their name appears on a permanent plaque that is on display in Steele Building, where much of the final advising occurs. Before his employment at UNC-Chapel, Locklear served as Director of Admissions at the University of North Carolina at Pembroke. One of the nominators wrote of Locklear, "he always returns calls, he is always willing to listen and does whatever he can to help you out and he also explains everything completely."

Lumberton, N.C.: Ashleigh Bell, the daughter of Greg and Bonita Bell of Lumberton, NC, celebrated her 4th birthday with a party at the Action Zone in Lumberton, NC on May 12, 1998. The party was attended by her parents, her brother Jamie Bell, her Grandparents Buddy and Sarah Bell, and a number of friends and relatives. The special attraction was a visit from Harmony the Clown. The theme for the party was "Barbie". Ashleigh received a number of gifts and cards.

Pediatric Pointers

By Joseph T. Bell

This issue we will talk about how germs are spread and some ways to help decrease the spread of infectious diseases. Nose, mouth and eye secretions are the most common sources of respiratory infections, such as the common cold. These secretions are usually spread by contaminated hands or something by kissing. Young children are especially prone to spreading these infections because they handle and mouth everything they can get their hands on. Droplets that spread through the air by coughing or sneezing are a less common means of transmitting respiratory infections. Droplets can travel up to six feet. Fecal contamination of hands or other objects accounts for the spread of most diarrhea, as well as infectious hepatitis. Unlike urine, which is usually sterile, bowel movements are composed of up to 50% bacteria. The discharge from sores such as chickenpox and fever blisters can be contagious. Most red rashes without a discharge do not spread by skin contact. Contaminated food or water accounted for many epidemics in earlier times. Even today some foods commonly contain bacteria that cause diarrhea. Around 50% of all raw turkey and chicken contains germs that can cause this illness. E. Coli, a germ that can cause bloody diarrhea, can be found in about 20% of ground beef. By contrast, despite all the media hype, less than 1% raw eggs are contaminated with the salmonella germ. Contaminated utensils such as bottles and dishes can occasionally spread respiratory or intestinal infections. Contaminated objects such as combs, brushes, and hats can spread lice, ringworm of the scalp, or impetigo. With all these ways to contact infectious agents, it is a wonder we all aren't sick all the time! Next week we will talk about ways to help prevent the spread of infectious diseases. Take care and we'll talk again next week!

Wilmington Port/Harbor Receives Full Federal Funding - $8.3 Million

Washington, D.C. -- Congressman Bill Hefner and Congressman Mike McIntyre officially announced today that the Wilmington Port has received full funding in the amount of $8.3 million by the U.S. House Energy and Water Appropriation Subcommittee. Congressman Bill Hefner stated, "This funding is a victory for the Port of Wilmington, and the state of commerce in North Carolina as a whole. It will broaden shipping capabilities, bring larger vessels into the harbor and push the state further into the international economy. I was pleased to work with the Appropriations Committee, Mr. McIntyre, and other members of the North Carolina congressional delegation in accomplishing this." Congressman Mike McIntyre stated, "The Port of Wilmington is a vital component of North Carolina's economy. I am pleased that the House Appropriations Subcommittee has agreed to this important funding level, and I remain committed to ensuring that this figure becomes law. In addition, I would like to specifically thank Congressman Hefner and the entire N.C. congressional delegation for their support in this matter." Erik Stromberg, Executive Director of the N.C. Ports Authority, said, "Deepening the Cape Fear River to 42 feet is vital to the future of the Port of Wilmington, if we are going to attract new customers, as well as to maintain our current business. It is impossible to overstate the importance of the key leadership provided by Congressmen Hefner and McIntyre to secure funding which will allow the deepening project to proceed on schedule. The additional $7.0 million in the House appropriation will supplement the $5.3 million in the President's budget proposal and give the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers a total of $8.3 million for necessary design and mitigation work this year." For the coming fiscal year, the Clinton Administration had budgeted only $5.3 million which would have seriously delayed the time line for harbor widening, deepening, and harbor improvements. In March of this year, the entire N.C. congressional delegation sent a letter to the Appropriations Committee asking for full funding of this important project. The Corps of Engineers had estimated that full funding during FY 1999 would allow the project to be complete two years ahead of schedule in 2006 instead of 2008.

Deepening the navigation channel at the Port from 38 feet to 42 feet will fundamentally enhance the delivery of international cargoes to and from business, industry, and consumers throughout the nation. Moreover, a deeper channel for the Port will provide significant strategic mobilization benefits to both the State Port, private businesses, and the Military Ocean Terminal at Sunny Point. With a 42-foot channel, the Port of Wilmington can continue to serve as a major east coast gateway to the world for decades to come. The U.S. House Appropriations Committee is scheduled to meet this week to consider the FY 1999 Energy and Water appropriations measure. After that, the measure goes to the full House of Representatives for approval. Once the measure passes the House any differences would be resolved with the U.S. Senate.
