Pembroke Elementary School News

Karen "Dee" Oxendine, Bookkeeper, and Linda K. Sampson, Receptionist attended the 51st Annual North Carolina Association of Educational Office Professional Conference in Greensboro, N.C. recently. They attended many workshops which were very interesting and helpful in their day activities and were able to fellowship with new/old friends.

"I JUST CAN'T SIT STILL"

Kindergarten and Pre-K students were singing and dancing in the seats at the recent concert of Mr. Al in Fayetteville, N.C. On April 12th, these students were entertained by national recording artist Mr. Al with songs such as "Atooty ta," "I can't sit still," "You gotta have hugs," and "The color song." Their exciting day ended with lunch at Burger King and McDonald.

National Library Week

Shelia Locklear, Media Coordinator and Bobbie Revels, Media Assistant enjoyed the week of April 15th as National Library Week. These special ladies not only received numerous tokens of love/appreciation but also celebrated the week by presenting each faculty and staff member with "goody bags" encouraging everyone to "Bee Readers." We at PES are sincerely appreciative of their concern for literacy and genuine love for the students.

Professional Secretaries Week

The week of April 22nd was celebrated by showing our "buzzing busy secretaries how much we appreciate the for their hard work. Ms. Linda Sampson, office receptionist, Mrs. Karen "Dee" Oxendine, bookkeeper, and Mrs. Linda Lowry, SIMS operator have the tremendous tasks of helping PES operate smoothly and efficiently. These unique ladies were showered during the week with tokens of love. THANKS AGAIN LADIES!

Off on an adventure

The second grade students, teachers, and assistants at PES recently enjoyed a fun and educational field trip to Nature Adventure in Newton Grove, N.C. Upon arrival, a great picnic lunch was enjoyed under the huge shed. Afterwards, a tractor drawn hay wagon took everyone to the woods to indulge in a scenic nature trail. Along the way the students learned about trees, plants, insects, animals, and the different stages of forest growth. At the end of the trail, students petted and fed barnyard animals and planted their very own flower at the greenhouse. After a refreshing cold drink, the hay wagon rode them to a beaver dam where students explored wetlands and various inhabitants. The adventure ended with a long hayride through the beautiful countryside. What a glorious time the students had!

Mrs. Sarah Hendrix's students are enjoying their reading lessons with many interesting stories. With each story, they create an art project reflecting the main idea of the story. The adventured of Mr. Fig and his friends were a delight for the children! The children are shown proudly displaying Mr. Fig's magical hat.

STUDENTS WIN COUNTY-WIDE COMPETITION OF "BATTLE OF THE BOOKS"

PES is "buzzing" proud to announce that on April 23, 2002, our students won "Battle of the Books" where emphasis is to Read, not necessarily to win. The students worked hard and had fun in preparing for this strategic competition as well as enhanced their reading skills, and we are so very honored to announce the following team members: Elizabeth N. Ellis, Rhonda A. Godwin, Taylor B. Hunt, Casey Jacobs, Destiny R. Locklear, Lakota Locklear, Taylor P. Locklear, Tyler Lockey, Amber D. McDowell, Luke C. Sampson, Jory C. Swett, Joseph P. Elderly with Diabetes will be studied in Robeson County

Winston-Salem, NC—About 250 Robeson County residents who are 65 or older and have diabetes will be contacted soon and asked about how they manage their diabetes and what kind of help they get. The interviews will be part of a research project called ELDERS by Wake Forest University School of Medicine aimed at finding ways to improve the quality of life for people with diabetes. The information will be collected in the participants' homes by local interviewers who will be trained by the Wake Forest research team. The study will involve African Americans, Native Americans and whites. Diabetes is a chronic condition that is caused by either a lack of the hormone insulin, or by the body's inability to use the insulin that it produces. Diabetes is the seventh-leading cause of death in North Carolina, and Robeson County consistently ranks in the top 10 percent of North Carolina counties in diabetes death rates and diabetes hospitalization costs. An estimated 5,000 adults in Robeson County have been diagnosed with diabetes, and 30 percent to 50 percent more adults may have undiagnosed diabetes. Diabetes greatly increases a person's risk of developing cardiovascular disease, a lower limb amputation, blindness and kidney failure. "As devastating a disease as diabetes is, there are some things that people with diabetes can do to delay or reduce their chance of facing these complications," said Sara Quandt, Ph.D., professor of epidemiology in the Department of Public Health Sciences at Wake Forest, who will head the ELDER research team. Dietary management, exercise, blood glucose monitoring, regular foot care, and taking medications on schedule are some of the most commonly cited diabetes self-management strategies. Combining these activities with regular doctor visits and eye screenings can greatly improve success in diabetes management. "Even when people know what to do to be successful in diabetes management, there can be barriers in that person's life that makes putting this into place difficult," said Quandt. These barriers can include financial limitations, lack of access to quality health care, lack of social support and other health conditions that need to be addressed. Dr. Mary Black, director of the Diabetes Community Center for Southeastern Regional Medical Center in Lumberton, applauds the effort of Quandt and her research team. "Diabetes is a major health care concern being addressed through collaborative efforts by members of the Robeson County Partnership for Community Health. Her research will offer greater insight as to the needs of our diabetes population," said Black. The study is funded by a grant from the National Institute on Aging. Quandt recently completed a three-year, federally funded study of nutritional self-management strategies of older adults in Robeson and Harnett counties. "That study was very eye-opening in helping us understand the many issues that older adults face in getting adequate nutrition. We were able to publish our results in several nationally regarded research journals. We were also able to share this information with health care and social service providers in the county," said Quandt.

Assisting her in the study are Thomas Arcury, Ph.D., Mara Vitols, Ph.D., Beverly Mellen, Ph.D. and Ronny Bell, Ph.D., all of Wake Forest University School of Medicine, and Anne Skelly, Ph.D., University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill School of Nursing.

Shelly Strickland receives Udall Foundation Scholarship

Shelly R. Strickland, double majoring in biological and biomedical engineering at North Carolina State University (NCSU), has been awarded the prestigious Morris K. Udall Foundation Scholarship in the maximum amount of $5,000. She is one recipient of 82 from across the United States selected for this scholarship. As part of the application criteria, Shelly was nominated by NCSU based on her leadership potential, commitment to Native American issues, academic standing, and personal attributes. She maintains a 4.0 GPA at NCSU. As a Udall Scholar, Shelly will attend a scholar orientation weekend to be held in Arizona during August, 2002. Each year the Foundation awards undergraduate scholarships of up to $5,000 to American juniors and seniors in fields related to the environment, and to Native American and Alaska Natives in fields related to health care or tribal policy.

The Morris K. Udall Foundation was established by the U.S. Congress in 1992 to honor Morris King Udall's thirty years of service in the House of Representatives. Morris Udall's career was distinguished by civility, integrity, and consensus, as well as a commitment to preservation of the nation's natural environment. Consistent with these values, the Udall Foundation is committed to educating a new generation of Americans to preserve and protect their national heritage through studies in the environment, Native American health and tribal policy, and effective public policy conflict resolution. The Foundation's activities are supported by the interest accrued in a federal trust fund and by contributions from the private sector. The Udall Foundation is an executive branch agency. The President of the United States appoints its board of trustees with the advice and consent of the U.S. Senate.

Mr. Udall was one of the most productive members of Congress in the latter part of the century. Chief among his accomplishments was the Alaska Lands Act of 1980, which doubled the size of the national park system, and tripled the size of the national wilderness system.

The bell tower on the campus of NCSU was lit in Shelly's honor on 1 May 2002. Shelly is the daughter of Ronald and Sandra Strickland. She is a 20000 graduate of Purnell Swett High School, Pembroke, NC.

Indian basketball Book's publication date in sight ...

As many of you know, Tim Brayboy and I have been working on a book about Indian basketball in Robeson & adjoining counties for some time. And the end is in sight.

We expect to present the book at the second annual meeting of the Indian Basketball Alumni Association, Inc. at the Indian Education Resource Center (located in the old "Indian" Pembroke High School building), next door to the UNC-Pembroke chancellor's residence, some time in December. There's our goal anyway! We can say with absolute certainty that the second banquet will be held when we have completed the book. At the meeting we will also disclose our long range plans, and present our non-profit corporate status to Indian basketball adherents. More information will be forthcoming in the next few days and weeks. The name of the book is:

PLAYING BEFORE AN OVERFLOW CROWD,

The story of Indian basketball in Robeson & adjoining counties between 1939-1967.

The book, now about 90% complete, is a history of "Indian" basketball in Robeson as we remember it. Information is scant, but it was a time of rank segregation although positive currents emanated from the unique social incubator and experiment. The book explores what happened, where it happened, when, how, who, and, most importantly, WHY?

Also, what valuable lessons can be learned from this special moment in time?

TO RESERVE A COPY, fill in the blanks and send it to Indian Basketball Book, c/o Bruce Barton, Post Office Box 362, Pembroke, N.C. 28372. Or call 910-521-2054 for more information. We also welcome old "Indian" basketball photographs and memories.
