Tariff Speech Made by Hon. Nicholas Longworth of Ohio

that law will not be perfect, and the Republican party then will be called upon to combat the floods of misrepresentation that we are combatting now. Fear of Misrepresentation, Not Facts.

In the future, as in the past, it will be misrepresentation of the facts that the Republican party has to fear and not the facts themselves. In this campaign it is misrepresentation of the facts that we have to fear and not the facts themselves. We shall have to go before the people and explain the facts with regard to this tariff law, and we will do it without distortion or demagoguery. We will not claim that this tariff is solely in the interests of the consumer, and on the other hand, we will not claim that it is made solely for the benefit of the producer; but we will claim that it is in the interests of both the producer and the consumer alike.

article of wearing apparel used by the poor man, upon no single article of food on the poor man's table, have the duties been increased, but, on the contrary, many of them have been greatly reduced. We will show them that the Payne law is an immense improvement over the Dingley law, and that it is a compliance with the pledges of the Republican platform. If we fail to do this, we shall fall divided, and our opponents, the Democratic party, will enjoy the fruits of victory. If we do it, we shall stand united, and the fruits of victory will be ours.

The Poultry Yard.

Let other folks do the fancy poultry business. You stick to practical work. Keep the brooder perfectly clean, and always feed the chicks in a clean place if you want them to live and thrive.

The baby ducks are just as well off, in fact better, without water to swim in until they have grown their crop of feathers.

Bits of meat carried out with brine from the barrel and left on the ground will give hens serious bowel trouble. Don't risk it.

Keep your hens from straying over on the land of your neighbor. Be particularly about this if he has any crop growing there.

In the northern latitudes May is the best month when hens should be set. Chicks hatched after that will be too late for laying next fall.

Give the houses a good cleaning and plow or spade up the yards. Dirty houses breed vermin, and polluted soils are incubators for the gape worm.

Give the turkey hen and her brood a coop large enough for the mother to move about and stand erect in, and you won't be so apt to have bad luck.

Guinea fowls will now be laying, and a watch must be kept on their nests, as it is their nature to hide them. The eggs laid later be hatched by hens.

It is annoying, perhaps, just about supper time, to have to stop to wash dirty eggs when the hens break one, but this is a task that must not be put off until tomorrow.

If fowls must run at large on range over a farm, by all means keep one breed and give them all the time, knowledge, and attention possible. You will have something of which you may be proud, and that will profit you financially as well.

Because hens are out on the land now do not therefore think they do not need shells and such things. They may not be able to find a bit of that kind of food in all their travels. A shortage here is apt to mean a shortage in eggs with good shells on them.

This is the month that gapes are more or less prevalent on heavy soils. Chicks should not be brooded on the same ground that was accented to chicks afflicted with the disease last year. Place them on ground that was never before used by poultry.

When hens begin to lay soft-shelled eggs it is time to ask yourself, "Where am I falling to give them to the food they need?" Don't be satisfied until you can answer that question. Almost always it is due to a lack of shell-making material.

Wheat bran, crushed egg shells, cut bone, broken mortar and oyster shells are fine for making eggs with good shells.

Hints for Stock Owners.

Dock the lambs early that are to be kept in the flock.

The flock should be turned to pasture early, while there is a short bite, but leave them out only a short time at first.

The change from dry feed to pasture should be made very gradually.

Sudden changes cause indigestion and scour.

A run on the eye fields will be good for the sheep and good for the rye.

The difference in the handling of two colts may make several hundred of dollars difference when they are offered for sale.

Before turning the young horses and colts to pasture, have the teeth of each one examined by a competent veterinary surgeon.

Defective teeth may retard the growth and development of a colt, causing a loss.

Prising on your rim is usually caused by a sharp tooth or teeth.

Don't yank or whip the horse, but find the cause. It may be a sharp tooth or the harness may be ill-fitting.

Some men whip their horses because they are in a bad frame of mind themselves.

Hogs are waste savers. A farm with out hogs has many leaks.

The fall litter should come in early September, if possible; therefore the sows should be bred in May.

Do not put any other stock in the pig pasture.

Cattle do not relish eating after pigs and colts are apt to injure hoofs by chasing them.

Look out for crop holes; the little pigs will find them.

Fortify your wire fence by placing boards around the bottom. The tighter these fit to the ground the better.

Some learn bad habits easily, and are very cute.

The cows should not be driven faster than a walk while on the way to the place of milking or feeding.

Give the calves a clean look of bright clover or mixed hay every day. You will be surprised how soon they will begin to eat it.

The spring calves should be kept in roomy box stalls the first summer, so they can be protected from the sun and hotting flies.

When the calf is about a month old separator milk can be given with flaxseed jelly added. Begin with about two tablespoons and increase to a cupful.

This is the month when cows go to pasture through a large part of the country. Give them a good start. Keep them in good heart till they have really made the change from hay to grass. It will pay.

The Story of an Orphan.

The Delinquent, the magazine that is conducting a national child rescue campaign, has the following touching little story in its May issue:

Mr. and Mrs. Welborn live in a big, luxurious home in a southern city. The house was approached by a winding drive and there were always several servants to meet each carriage. But despite the deep carpets and the famous pictures on the wall it was a lonely home, for the rooms never echoed to childish laughter, nor were there ever baby finger prints on the windowpanes, or dolls downward on the floor.

Finally, when she could bear the loneliness no longer, Mrs. Welborn adopted an 8-year old girl—Anabel. Anabel was a very attractive child, seeming never to grow weary, but very self-willed. No one could manage her. But her eager mind and fine face made her foster parents love her devotedly. They gave Anabel the finest of clothes, music lessons and devotedly showered their money at her feet. Anabel remained the same, seeming to take it as a matter of course. Relatives made it so unpleasant for them that Mr. and Mrs. Welborn withdrew from society, sold their beautiful home and moved to Denver, where he set up in business again.

One day, without any previous indication, Mr. Welborn dropped dead. Investigation showed him to be heavily in debt true to the proud southern type who set goodwill above gain. Hard creditors took their home, even to the last bit of furniture. Mrs. Welborn had never cooked a meal in her life. Letters to relatives found that they had suffered reverses, and that none could offer her a home.

In a lone back room Mrs. Welborn fought it out alone. Hunger conquered, and she went to her church to ask for a place in the Old Ladies' home. The chairman was absent.

That night Anabel, who had gone out without a word, came to the bedroom and said: "Mother, if it is all over, you are to have a comfortable home again. I have earned a place as a dressmaker."

lat. I am just beginning to appreciate you."

The bread was returning. Mrs. Welborn was being repaid for her mother's trust. Anabel needed this trial to soften her heart and make a woman of her. Today she is one of the greatest soloists in the west. Her name is known in many states, and her career is only beginning. At every concert she gives, a quiet little woman sits in the audience who never takes her eyes off her.

In the May Century.

In uncounted thousands the present great revival of interest in the study of the Bible among the undergraduates of our colleges and universities seems the most important and significant movement of the day. The May Century will have the first magazine discussion of the great awakening from the pen of Clayton Sedgwick Cooper, secretary of the international committee of the Y. M. C. A. in special charge of the Bible work in educational institutions.

"The Archaic Charm of Palestine" is the keynote of the fourth paper in the May Century of the "Holy Land" series in which the journey "From Nazareth to Jerusalem" will be pictured in Mr. Hiebner's brilliant text and in three paintings to be reproduced in the full colors of the original. By Jules Guery in a series of talks, Homage of Nazareth and The Damascus Gate, Jerusalem.

"The keynote of my complexion is a sickly, burning sympathy," writes Miss Mulvaney in the closing chapter of her May Century, which will come to an end in the May Century. These chapters besides recounting the experiences and calling attention to the experiences of her first four years of teaching in the public schools of Poland, of the great actress who died in California in April, 1907, and of her life hopes and ambitions, they are full of an abundance of other things that will give you a new perspective on the world.

SUN RAYS IN READING.

The Something in Poetry That is More Than Just Words.

(St. Nicholas.)

Have you ever, when you were smaller than you are now, seen a sunbeam glancing across the room, and tried to catch it in your hands? Of course you can not possibly get it, can not feel it, can not do more than close your little hands upon it and pretend it is within them.

Well, there are lots of other things besides sunbeams that it is practically impossible to catch; and yet we have a way of trying to do it, even after we are far past childhood. Among the rest are a number of feelings and ideas that, like the sunbeam, seem tangible enough, but which somehow slip through the words in which we try to catch them, as the ray light slips through your fingers.

It is in order to grasp those shining yet intangible parts of our mind and heart that poetry came into existence. For poetry is more than just words, and often, even when you do not understand what it is all about, you get a great deal of pleasure just from its sound and movement; it satisfies something in you, it manages to hold the sunbeam for a moment, and for an instant to catch what is intangible even wholly to capture.

This does not mean that poetry is always about things hard to understand, or that you can not find much in it that might be read by prose. But there is something besides that, and it is that, and not the actual things, that makes it different from prose, and which gives you a pleasure in reading that is not given by the reading of the words alone.

An Indian Legend.

It is said that the first man who ever lived on this earth was an Indian. He was a brave and a warrior, and he was the first to discover the art of war. He was the first to discover the art of war, and he was the first to discover the art of war.
