

WAKE FOREST UNVEILS MEMORIAL MONUMENT

Dedicated to Mothers of Wake Forest Men Who Died in the World War.

ERECTED BY 1920 CLASS

(Special to Daily News.) Wake Forest, Nov. 11.—In observance of Armistice day, the monument given by the class of 1920 as a memorial to the mothers of the Wake Forest men who gave their lives in the world war was unveiled and dedicated here this morning at 11 o'clock.

President William Louis Poterak presided and made the dedicatory address. President Poterak gave an account of the donation and the remarkable of its significance. The monument was formally presented to the college by W. J. Bailey. Funds for its erection and the management were in the hands of A. D. Odum, a member of the class of 1920.

The memorial was set up last Friday but the formal unveiling was held over until today. It is situated directly in front of the administration building, about half way between the building and the east wall of the campus, thus placing it almost exactly in the center of the campus. The monument stands nine feet high from the ground, the base being a mound of turf three feet high.

Miss Susie Holding, sponsor of the class of 1920, represented the class here today and unveiled the memorial, which was wrapped in American flags and service flags. Doctor Benjamin Blood, of the English department, then read a dedicatory ode which he had composed.

The program was concluded by a prayer by Dr. W. R. Cullom, in which he asked that the principles for which these men gave their lives might not die with their sacrifices but might be perpetuated in the lives of their surviving comrades. Blessings were asked upon the limitation of armament conference that it might accomplish means toward the abolition of wars and bring peace to earth.

The face of the monument bears the dedication and the names of the 20 Wake Forest men who made the ultimate sacrifice. The opposite side bears a Latin inscription "Dulce Et Decorum Est Pro Patria Mori." The names of the men who lost their lives are as follows: A. J. Harris, P. C. Hardwood, A. T. Howard, P. T. Lockerman, T. S. Mast, C. C. Olive, J. E. Ray, G. L. Rhodes, C. O. Tidlock, E. B. Roberts, T. Y. Robinson, E. H. Smith, W. Speight, P. E. Sprinkle, A. B. Stevenson, R. H. Turner, H. D. Ward, S. W. White and I. C. Woodward.

Kinston Observes Armistice Day.

(Special to Daily News.) Kinston, Nov. 11.—This town and section paid honor to their war dead and celebrated peace jointly today. The American legion had charge of exercises at a theater which lasted an hour and all business was suspended from shortly before noon until 1 o'clock. R. N. Parker, an eloquent speaker from Enfield, delivered the principal address. He was introduced by Reynold T. Allen, of the local post. Bells tolled their angling for the unknown hero at noon, and whistles throughout the city joined in a call of the community to prayer. Some special services were held in churches.

AMUSEMENTS

Larry Semon at Grand Today. The Grand theater offers its patrons today a double program above the average. It is a known fact that what will please one will not please another, realizing this the management has arranged a program of three pictures all different in every respect as to plot and atmosphere. Larry Semon heads the bill in "The Rent Collector" a comedy that will help you solve your rent problems.

Larry is always having accidents in his comedies. In "The Rent Collector" he drives his automobile containing his leading lady over a cliff. The machine is wrecked, but the couple are unharmed and crawling from the debris, glance at the cliff above, wondering how it all happened.

"After The Show." If you want to make a journey back stage, you should see William de Mille's splendid Paramount production, "After the Show," which will be the big feature at the Bijou theater again today. The picture mirrors the lives of those behind the footlights, who mask the sorrows and tragedies of their own lives with a smile and a song, that the world may be amused.

A complete theater setting with audience hall, orchestra pit, stage and back stage areas, with dressing rooms, wings, flies and all the typical stage accoutrements, was constructed at the Paramount studio in California where the picture was filmed.

For the theater sequence, a gorgeous musical show was staged, in which thirty beautifully gowned and costumed girls took part. The sketch was rehearsed for some weeks before actual filming started. The studio stage carpenters and electricians employed in the scene were all perfectly at home in their roles. The scenes were prepared at an enormous expense.

Extra features are the latest Pathé News, Aesop's Fables, and musical music by the Bijou concert orchestra and symphony pipe organ. Direction Prof. Boenck.

Wm. Hart At The Isla. One would think that every thrill, every act of reckless daredevilry, had been injected in William S. Hart photographs. However, this famous western character always figures in some new and startling adventures.

For instance, in "Lion of the Hills" the initial Ince-Artercraft picture, which will be seen at the Isla today, Hart portrays an outlaw who falls under the influence of a beautiful girl. He loves her with all the desperate passion of which his wild nature is capable, and determines to reform. In doing this, his source of income is naturally shut off, and he is in trying straits for ready cash.

Just at this crisis, a big rodeo is to be held in a nearby city. A cash prize is offered for the principal event—a "jump in the saddle and away" race—and the outlaw determines to enter himself and his Pinto pony. In doing so he knows he is taking a tremendous risk, as the peculiarly marked pony is known to the sheriff and his deputies, but goaded by necessity he takes a chance, and in the presence of a crowd leaps into the saddle.

It is during this wild ride with its thrills of contesting cowboys that excitement rises to its highest pitch.

SURPRISE IS SPRUNG BY THE FRENCH BLUEBEARD

Produces Two Letters From One of Supposed Victims, Dated After Time Of Alleged Murders.

Yersailles, Nov. 11.—(By Associated Press.)—A surprise was sprung in the assises court here today when Henri Landru, the alleged modern "Bluebeard," on trial for the murder of 10 women, and the son of one of them, produced two letters bearing the purported signature of Madame Desree Guillin, one of his supposed victims, dated November and December, 1915, respectively. The prosecution charged that Madame Guillin, a Brazilian, by birth, was murdered in August, 1915.

The letters were addressed to the Bank of France, instructing that institution to dispose of her securities deposited in the bank by her. The bank, satisfied that the signatures were genuine, followed her instructions.

The prosecution called in a handwriting expert who swore that the signatures were forgeries. The jury was visibly impressed by the fact that the bank had accepted the signatures as genuine. Counsel for the defense spent a long time in cross-examining the handwriting expert.

TWO YEARS FOR TRYING TO PASS MUTILATED CURRENCY

(Special to Daily News.) Asheville, Nov. 10.—Alex. Ellis, arrested here several days ago while attempting to pass mutilated currency at a local bank, was sentenced to serve two years in the United States Federal prison at Atlanta, by Judge E. Tate Webb in a verdict handed this morning.

Ellis entered a plea of guilty to the charge of mutilating money, and threw himself upon the mercy of the court.

Ellis proved an illiterate, who was neither sure of his own name, nor the number of his children. The story of how he came into possession of nine $10 bills, that had been mutilated, ostensibly so that portions removed would be in raising $1 bills to those of $10 denomination, however, was erratic, and Ellis was badly cross-examined by the district attorney and by Judge Webb.

LEGION AS DEMOCRACY'S GUARD, SAYS GARDNER

Will Not Allow Bourbonism Nor Bolshevism, He Says At Fayetteville.

HOPE OF WHOLE NATION

(Special to Daily News.) Fayetteville, Nov. 11.—O. Max Gardner, of Shelby, was the chief speaker at the Armistice day celebration here today. Mr. Gardner called the day "muster day of America's noblest young manhood," and referred to the American legion as "embodying the nation's hope, the world's mightiest force for peace."

A large audience heard Mr. Gardner's eloquent tribute to the soldier dead. He bade the ex-servicemen courageously to face the problems of peace. "Those immortal soldiers will never allow us to remain in our inactivity, they ever contact that we become bolshevik," he concluded.

Mr. Gardner's speech in part follows: "This is muster day of America's noblest young manhood. I salute your incomparable American legion as embodying the nation's hope, Carolina's constructionists, and the world's mightiest force for peace."

Bible and drama, history and the consensus of the races have called in making courage the distinctive virtue of youth. The world has expected that whatever shortcomings the young man may have, he shall abound in high ideals and the courage to fight and die for them. And because of the lofty sentiment, the strong hope, the great resolve, the patient and undeviating purpose, and the unselfish consecration of the American soldier, aided by faith in Divine Master and Lord and Captain, American soldiery has set up for itself a peculiar place in the esteem of the world.

For us particularly, there is a martial heritage which is not unlike the force which the world cannot give and is equally powerless to take away. Whose intellect is so dead and whose soul is so sluggish that it will not stir at the simple heritage of the soldier in arms—the first at Babel, last at Appomattox, furthest at Gettysburg, and earliest to cross the elaborated creation of steel and psychology—the Hindenburg line.

Yes, patriotism has been a passion with us as with the finest spirits of every age. No sacrifice has been too great if the country asked it; no tax too heavy; no duty too dangerous. Base spiritless men are more ready to make their country serve than to minister to it, always eager to turn every crisis to personal advantage, unfailingly have appeared, but few of them are native to our country than to any other on earth. There is a compensation for such baseness and meanness in the sure uncovering of their hideousness and a like turning of the pure white light on the beauty of self-sacrifice.

And in the degree that men love their own country, they will love humanity in all countries. Cynics were wont to sneer at the hero, "Wagner because he thought he was president of humanity." The idea was old as Jesus of Nazareth. He who feels no passionate love for his own country will never care for the world, as he does not care for his own family will never love his own community.

All the world pays the perfect tribute to our soldiery. But the world is not so enthusiastic about our citizenship. Americans to our country come over here and go back wonderfully impressed with our machinery for making a living; they are not so enamored of our way of living. Of the great American democracy, rightly called "The Republic of God," the great schoolhouse in which is being tried out the greatest experiment in self government, volumes have been written; but translating the democracy into the lives of cities and counties has been the despair of every ardent lover of his country.

It should be no difficult undertaking to re-make the soldier-citizen into the peace-time patriot. As the citizenship demands but the infinitesimal portion of personal discomforts that a military campaign exacts. But being a good citizen is a man's job. The householders of the land are ready to agree hastily with the uninformed majority, to declare that its prejudices are patriotic, its suspicions are intelligent, its resistance to the plain mandates of the citizenship virtuous. Here is something worthy of your martial heritage—the restoration of honesty in taxation and the principle of absolutely fair play in all our elections. Around the first have been fought nearly all the battles of the past; about the second will come most of the conflicts of the future.

It is written in the Book of Fate that our democracy is going to complete itself. There is an ex-soldier who battled for self-determination of other people who would for a moment shrink from fighting for the self-expression of his own people. Let not the writers of the history of the American Army, that having fought to gain the whole world for democracy, you came back to quit and to lose your own souls. You men and your fifty thousand associates in arms in North Carolina, should courageously face the problems of peace. It was not your duty to die for your country, but it is your grand and sacred privilege to live for your country.

Our martial heritage comes down to us by the inexorable law of transmission, proclaimed in that portion of the decalogue which passes to the third and fourth generations the virtues of the fathers. The cowardly soldiers will not allow us to remain bourbon, nor will they ever consent that we become bolshevik.

MISS JULIUS CULBRETH THE BRIDE OF WILLIAM WILLIAMS

(Special to Daily News.) Dunn, Nov. 11.—A wedding of much interest to the Cape Fear district was celebrated Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robinson McLaurin when Miss Julius Culbreth, daughter of Mrs. McLaurin and the late Julius Culbreth, became the bride of William Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan A. After the ceremony the bridal pair and 40 of their friends adjourned to the home of the bridegroom's parents, where one of the suppers for which that home has been famous for more than 25 years was served. The following morning Mr. and Mrs. Williams motored to Fayetteville where they boarded a north bound train to visit cities where they will spend a brief time enjoying their honeymoon.
