

Armistice Day Is Observed By Local Schools and Colleges

Students of Two Women's Colleges Celebrate the Day—N. C. C. W. Girls in Parade—All Public Schools of City Hold Patriotic Exercises With Interesting Programs.

The celebration of Armistice day in Greensboro was not confined to the parade or to the program arranged by the Henry K. Burton post of the American legion. All of the city schools held appropriate programs and at the colleges special services were held in commemoration of the signing of the armistice and the ending of the war.

The North Carolina College for Women entered an automobile in the parade held under the auspices of the legion, a member of each college class being in the car. All of the rest of the student body gathered along the college driveway and cheered as the long parade passed through the campus.

At 11:30 o'clock Hon. A. L. Brooks spoke to the students of the college about the significance of Armistice day. Dr. J. Clyde Taylor, pastor of the First Baptist church, conducted the devotional services. Mr. Brooks, who was introduced by Dean W. C. Smith, declared that the United States has been set aside by God to lead the world. This nation, he declared, never raised an army to send across the ocean for any one of the usual causes of war; troops were sent in order to bring an end to all wars.

The campus bell tolled during the two minutes of silent prayer and the service was brought to a close by the benediction pronounced by Dr. Taylor. All classes were suspended at Greensboro college during the day and at 8:30 o'clock a brief service was held at which Dr. Vining discussed some of the lessons of the World war. An excellent musical program, consisting of patriotic songs, was given by members of the music faculty.

The meeting was adjourned shortly after 10 o'clock and the students thronged along West Market street to watch the parade pass by. At 10:30 o'clock Dr. J. H. Barnhardt lectured to the students, discussing his impressions of battlefields of France. Dr. Barnhardt only recently returned from a visit to Europe.

The feature of the exercises held at the Lindsay street school was an address by Dr. Charles F. Myers, pastor of the First Presbyterian church. He told the children the story of the famous exploit of Sergeant Alvin C. York and also spoke of the burial of the unknown American soldier in the national cemetery at Arlington.

Pupils of the school sang a number of patriotic songs and several recitations were given. At the West Lee street school Frederick Archer, superintendent of schools, talked to the children about the reasons for observing the day. He told something of the horrors of the World war and discussed the even greater horrors which will be experienced in the event of another war.

Mrs. Hartsell, elementary supervisor, told of the pride all should have in the fact that America was able to throw several million men into battle at the turning point of the war.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben M. Williams, both of whom served overseas, told of their personal experiences in France and each discussed the conditions in France and Belgium at the time of the signing of the armistice.

The day was observed at the Ashboro-Pearson street school by songs and recitations by the pupils. After the exercises were held at each of the schools the children were dismissed so that they could attend the exercises at the courthouse.

Patriotic exercises were also held at the Pomona school yesterday. The flag of all the allies were on display and a number of recitations and songs featured the program. The program was concluded with the salute to the flag.

GREENSBORO FITTINGLY CELEBRATES ARMISTICE DAY; A GOOD PROGRAM

Pericles deliver an oration, the eloquence of which comes ringing down through the ages.

Names Indelibly Written.

"First," said Dr. Long, "I would speak a word to and of the living. Two years ago I was asked to deliver a memorial address to the Confederate veterans of Guilford county. As I spoke to these old warriors who followed Lee and Jackson, I realized that they were living largely in the past. I reviewed with them some of their unsurpassed deeds of valor and endurance and the part they had played in the history of our country. Today, I address young men and women, the flower of our youth; yes, those who have already written their names in indelible characters upon the most glorious page of all military history. And what is quite as important, the men and women upon whom the future of our country largely rests. For whether we will or not no public question for the next generation shall be determined without the consent of the men and women who wear the uniform together with those who stayed at home and by their activities made it possible for them to go. If these soldier boys above all others, were judged best fitted to carry our flag and defend our democratic form of government in time of war even upon foreign soil, they are fully as capable of upholding the glory of the stars and stripes and maintaining the prestige of our institutions in time of peace. If the legionnaires believe the ex-service personnel should have a bonus, by the eternal they shall have it sooner or later; because, forsooth, they and their friends are the government. Don't let us forget that this government is by the people and for the people!"

Referring to the dead of the speaker said: "I would that I had the tongue of a Pericles that I might speak words that breathe and live radiate with that intense spirit of patriotism which carried Henry Burton, Alfred Scales, John Paisley, Alfred Williams and Annie Revelly and others to the farthest limits of sacrificial duty! Greater love hath no man than this that he lay down his life for another."

A Glorious Death.

"To those who are today bowed in sorrow I would quote the name Athenian orator who said on a similar occasion 'Fortunate indeed are they who draw for their lot a death so glorious as that which has caused your mourning and to whom life has been so exactly measured as to terminate in the happiness in which it is passed.'

"We are gathered here to celebrate Armistice day. We mingle our tears with those who weep; we recount the heroic deeds of our noble dead; we look up through our tears and give thanks to an all wise Providence that their sacrifice took place on the battle front in France at the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month of the year 1918."

The speaker then reviewed America's part in bringing Germany to her senses. He declared that America once she had declared war quickly put 4,000,000 men into training and when she struck her stride sent men overseas at the rate of 300,000 per month.

"Without question," said he in conclusion, "it was the American dough-boy who turned the tide of battle and forced the Germans to accept the hard terms of the Armistice that Marshal Foch very properly laid down for them."

"Therefore, friends, the boy whom we sent to check the on-coming hordes of German barbarians, that stalwart, chivalrous young soldier in whose honor we meet today, we feel with his face to the foe, that hero of the world's war, whether he lies buried in his native soil or in Flanders field, contributed his quota toward stopping that awful cataclysm of war that was rapidly engulfing the world."

Glory Shall Last.

"To him should be erected a monument which shall stand throughout the ages. To him has already been ascribed a glory that shall shine as long as time shall last. Upon the marble shaft that marks his resting place should be chiseled the living words written upon the stones covering the Spartan soldiers who died at Thermopylae. 'Stranger, go tell in Lacedaemon that we lie here in obedience to her command.'"

During the morning patriotic exercises were conducted in the schools of the city. Special speakers, telling of America's glorious history, were secured by each school.

In the afternoon throngs of people were on the main streets participating in the merry-making. Fire crackers and other combustibles were in evidence. While no one was seriously hurt, it was reported that several persons suffered slight injuries by the bursting of large fire crackers thrown at them by unscrupulous persons.

Officers of the American legion expressed themselves as being exceptionally well pleased with the showing made during the day. Commander B. T. Baynes stated yesterday that he expects to begin immediately preparing for a still better celebration in 1922.

HAD TO HAVE HELP TO PUT ON CLOTHES

Mrs. Bellomay's Trouble Was Rheumatism—Is Picture of Health Now.

"I'm going to praise Tanica just as long as I live," said Mrs. A. J. Bellomay, R. F. D. No. 6, Charlotteville, Va. "Tanica has relieved me of three years' awful suffering, built me up 25 pounds in weight and I actually feel better than I ever did before in my life. After I had the 'flu' three years ago my stomach was so disordered I almost had to give up eating anything, and I had rheumatism in my right shoulder so bad for three months I couldn't get my clothes on without help."

"Four bottles of Tanica have simply made a new person of me. Why? I look a perfect picture of health and am the happiest woman in the world. I tell my children if it hadn't been for this medicine they wouldn't have any mother now."

Tanica is sold in Greensboro by Greensboro Drug Co., and all leading druggists.

Business Men and Bankers

We do not mean to insinuate for a moment that Bankers are not Business men. We are. But it sometimes seems as though men in business do not realize this fact.

Many times we see sad things happening in the business community which could have been averted if Business Men had listened to Bankers.

Many times we have actually ached to advise with men, to tell them things we KNEW to be true, but could not because our advice was not sought and we could not impose it.

Business men who realize that the personnel of this Bank is made up of men who look back upon successful business careers, men who have faced and solved the vital, basic problems of the business world cash in on this experience by bringing their problems to us.

Our advisory service to customers is one of the most important services we render.
