"One Arabian Night"
There is a modern picture masterpiece at the Bijou Theater. It is "One Arabian Night."
You have until tonight to see it—and if you do not see it you are missing something for this First National attraction is destined to become the most sensational picture of the year. The magnetic Pola Negri is the star of the production and Ernst Lubitsch, the producer of "Passion" and "Gypsy Blood," has directed it and plays in it.
This combination is sufficient to assure any one who has seen their past successes that "One Arabian Night" is worth seeing, but there are so many other elements of excellence in the production that it will remain long in the memory.

It would be painting the lily to attempt to praise the acting of Pola Negri or the artistic direction of Lubitsch, for they have definitely established their hold upon the lovers of good pictures. But in "One Arabian Night" Miss Negri gives further proof that her pantomimic powers are inexhaustible and hypnotic.
Throughout there is a fine flavor of suspense, and incident upon incident, now humorous, now intensely dramatic, follow in such rapid succession that the spectator is transported to the Orient under the spell of the Oriental tale. The city of Bagdad has been reproduced on a vast scale for the background of the story, and it is one of the most elaborate sets ever seen in a motion picture.

"One Arabian Night" is one of the most colorful dramas ever shown on the silver sheet.
"Bairn News" and "Tonics of The Day" will be shown again today. A special musical score is played by the Bijou concert orchestra and symphony pipe organ under the direction of Prof. Boesch.
Earle Williams At The Isis.
For atmosphere in "Bring Him In," the Earle Williams production, which will be shown at Isis theater today, Vitaphone obtained permission from the United States authorities to use several full-blooded Indians, which were brought from the reservation for the purpose of the production. The Vitaphone lot, his mother, a stout Indian squaw, dressed in a gayly colored gingham gown and with a red handkerchief tied over her head, carried the little papoose in a basket woven cradle upon her back. The little fellow was wrapped in blankets and strapped to the cradle with thongs of rawhide. The cradle itself is an exceptionally fine specimen of Indian basketry. It is made of sweet grass and colored raffia and has a border worked in basket design.
While on location the Indians fashioned a birch bark canoe, which they presented to Earle Williams. The star used this canoe in the production.
Another Indian, an expert with handling the bowie knife and who has a record as a fighter, is also seen in the picture. He wears the costume used by the Indians in British Columbia, a somewhat picturesque dress, and instead of the long braids used by the tribal Indian has his hair bobbed, similar to the young woman on New York street. Instead of moccasins he wears high boots.
"Three Musketeers."
On the Bijou motion picture stage ever constructed, Douglas Fairbanks made his celluloid version of Dumas' immortal story, "The Three Musketeers," prepared for the screen by Edward Knoblock and directed by Fred Niblo who also directed Mr. Fairbanks in "The Mark of Zorro."
The first shots taken were of the Queen's boudoir, the set for which was erected on "Stage No. 6," which is the largest motion picture stage ever built, and which is located in Hollywood, Calif.
All of the feminine playboys goseously costumed, appeared in these first scenes. They include Mary McLaren in the part of Queen Anne of Austria; Marguerite De La Motte, as Constance; Barbara La Marr, characterizing Milady; and all of the ladies in waiting.

The Queen's room is as near the exact reproduction of the famed boudoir as it was humanly possible to make it. Every portion and detail is historically correct even to the painting of the walls which was all hand painted with exactly the same pictures that ancient book-ends indicate graced the walls of this noted chamber.
Both the Brunton studio and the Fairbank's studio were used in filming this remarkable tale. Between seventy-five and one hundred sets were used in the entire picture, all of them exact counterparts of the original rooms and buildings they represent.
For action, "The Three Musketeers" excels anything Fairbanks has ever done. There are sixteen duels fought, in one of which Fairbanks as D'Artagnan, and the three musketeers engage eight rivals. This feature will play at the Grand Theater beginning Monday, November 21.
Seats will go on sale at the box-office Thursday morning at ten o'clock. No seats will be reserved for the matinees.

When A Man Finds Himself

"Sometimes it is early in life; sometimes it is late; and, SOMETIMES, it is too late. A man does not find himself until he is master of himself. He is not master of himself if he cannot save—if he spends it all. When a man finds that he CAN save, and starts the plan of laying so much aside each week, or each month, it is then that confidence comes to him, and, with every dollar added to his Savings account comes added strength. We pay four per cent interest on savings and time deposits.

RAILROAD AND DUNN IN QUARREL OVER REALTY

Each Claims Lucknow Square, Worth About $100,000—Court Will Decide It This Week.
(Special to Daily News.)
Dunn, Nov. 14.—Final disposition of the case in which the town of Dunn and the Atlantic Coast Line Railway company are contending for possession of Lucknow square, a valuable piece of property situated in the heart of Dunn's business district, is expected this week when attorneys for the contenders will argue the matter in Harnett county Superior court.
Ernest F. Young and Godwin and Williams are representing the town, and Cook and Cook, of Fayetteville, are attorneys for the railroad. The town's attorneys are, they say, confident that they will win a verdict. The case is on the calendar to begin Tuesday.
Lucknow square, used as a cotton market for more than 15 years, covers two blocks between Broad and Pearl streets and Railroad avenue and Lucknow square west. A conservative estimate places its value at about $100,000. The town contends that it was dedicated to public use by railway officials when the town was platted. They have witnesses who will testify that they were present when this was done. Acting upon the assumption that it was public property, the board of town commissioners last year turned the property over to the Women's club, the members desired to convert it into a public park.
When the women started to carry out their program of beautification they were stopped by a restraining order issued at the instance of the railway company. That order is still in force and will remain so until the matter is settled this week.
A contract through which the Carolina Light and Power company agrees to purchase electric plant owned by the town of Dunn for $45,000 and furnish the community hydro-electric service for domestic and industrial purposes will be submitted to the voters of Dunn for ratification by popular election on December 13.
In the event the contract is ratified the company will purchase the lines between Henson and Smithfield, now owned by the town of Benson, to connect it with the company's distributing point at Smithfield and will extend the lines to Dunn. Of the contract sum the company is to pay $5,000 cash and the balance in 1932, when bonds now outstanding against the local plant will become due.
This move is considered by the town because the large growth in demand for electrical current has overtaxed the municipal plant to such a degree as to make it imperative that a larger service be given. It would cost the town upward of $100,000 to equip its plant to supply the demand and at the same time it would be necessary for the town to keep its present rates, which are much above those charged by the company in other towns.

FOUND RELIEF IN THE NICK OF TIME

Employee of West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company Thought His Time Had Come.
"I was so discouraged I was beginning to think my time had come, but Tanlac certainly saved the day for me," said S. T. Mitchell, 225 Walnut St., Covington, Va., a valued employee of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Co.
"Some time ago I had an awful cold that seemed to go all through my system. At times every muscle in my body ached and I would have cold, chilly feelings all over. My head simply throbbed with pain and I had neuralgia in my neck and right shoulder.
"I believe I got Tanlac just in the nick of time. I was on the verge of a collapse but the way it has straightened me out beats anything I ever saw in all my life. I feel fine now and am working every day. There is nothing I can say that's too good for Tanlac."
Tanlac is sold in Greensboro by Greensboro Drug Co., and all leading druggists.

FINDS A TOMATO GARDEN IN SHALLOWS OF NEUSE RIVER

(Special to Daily News.)
Kinston, Nov. 14.—An American consul service in the east and who as an engineer was a pioneer in African developmental enterprises, has rendered a valuable service to his country. Cheney has just had his most interesting experience since the home guard, of which he was top sergeant, was mustered out without having fired a shot.
Cheney has been surveying along Neuse river a short distance below the wreck of the Confederate ram Neuse. The river has been mostly off on a visit since the beginning of the drought. Today he made the interesting announcement to the world that in the river bottom, close to the channel, where a few weeks ago a mighty stream flowed, he had found quantities of "Lycopersicon esculentum," usually a dry land plant. "Lycop" and the rest of it is in ordinary backyard parlance the tomato, with the first "o" accented, or if one comes from Virginia or Vassar, the same tomato with accent on the "om." How Cheney's tomatoes came to grow in the shallows of Neuse river, with little ripples playing about their roots, has not been determined by the local society for the advancement of agricultural science. The society is investigating the discovery. Anyway, there the plants were, about 50 of them, in the bloom of health.

Hickory, Nov. 14.—Announcement was made today by C. A. Yost manager of the local office of the Southern Express company that effective this day express would be handled on trains 21 and 22, giving a large section of the state improved service. Hereafter a package leaving Hickory at noon will reach Goldsboro without being transferred, and Wilmington with but one change. Similarly, parcels from Hickory to Asheville will be delivered more promptly. The new service will prove a special benefit to shippers of dairy products.
Rev. W. O. Goode, secretary-treasurer of the educational board of the Western North Carolina Methodist conference, has completed the removal of the office from Brevard to Hickory and is located in the new Shuford building on 14th street. Mr. Goode, who was pastor at Park Place church, Greensboro, last year, and pastor at Hickory two years before that time, succeeds Dr. T. F. Marr. Mr. Goode said he moved the office to Hickory because this is the geographical center of the conference and "the best town in North Carolina." He and Mrs. Goode have many friends here who are glad to welcome their return.
