MEN AND BUSINESS

By RICHARD SPILLANE

In almost every city of America earnest gentlemen connected with civic organizations present multi-colored maps showing how their town is the gate to this or that section of the globe or the hub of business and transportation for a vast territory. When a town isn't a hub or a gate it is a great convention city or the metropolis of the east, west, north or south or is on its way to that proud position.

In some of the gate cities the visitor is inclined to look if the gate is open or there is a gap in the fence by which he may get out.

These maps are fully as dependable as those of railroads which show the road on which you are traveling runs straight from city to city although at the time you are looking at the map the engineer, in rounding a curve, may be able to shake hands with the rear brakeman.

Some municipalities can achieve distinction by claiming to be the cleanest city or of having traffic regulations that regulate and, furthermore, proving the claim is warranted.

Hubs and gates are becoming common if not meaningless. It's time for something new.

On most of the farms in the coastal region of the south the traveler sees patches of sugar cane. Some of this cane goes to the strap-making plants that supply the pharmaceutical and beverage concerns, of which there are many south of Mason and Dixon's line. In Savannah and other coast cities it is common to see the blacks chewing sugar cane. It is nourishing, stimulating and a joy to any one with a sweet tooth, and every darky has the latter.

About the only concerns in the south that have not felt the depression are the patent medicine and beverage industries, if industries they are to be called. There are more of them in the south than in the north and, from what bankers say, their profits are big and all times are good with them.

In one southern city a patent medicine concern when it incorporated did so under the same name as that borne by one of the oldest and most respected citizens of that section. The "medicine" company has its plant near the eminent citizen's great cotton mill and his patience is about exhausted from explaining that he is not connected with the medicine house and wouldn't be for love or money.

It's all in the point of view. A traveler was asked by a prominent citizen of a southern center as to the hotel in which he was stopping. The traveler was apologetic. "I'm afraid," he said, "I got into the wrong house. I'm at the—"

"Why," exclaimed the local man, "what's the matter with it? Isn't it first class? We rate it as our best hotel."

"The trouble with it," replied the northerner, "is that the rooms are so small that the bed takes up most of the space. The bathroom is not much larger than a Saratoga trunk. The clothes closet is so shallow that when you put one coat and a cloak in it it is crowded. You cannot get by the bed to reach the bureau without walking sideways. The floor is carpeted. That's an abomination in the south. In a hot country rugs should be used. The carpet in my room hasn't been thoroughly cleaned in many a month. The lights are so poor it is difficult to read or write at night or on a dark day. The telephone is back of the bed and you have to be something of a contortionist to use it."

"Goodness gracious," said the local man, "I never heard of such a thing. I heard the rooms were small, but I judged from the lobby, which is grand and the exterior of the house, which is most attractive, that it was excellent."

"Yes," replied the northerner, "that's the trouble. Travelers get their views of cities largely from the hotels and the local people rarely see the house—except as far as the lobby or dining room."

"But the rates are very low," urged the southern gentleman.

"They are not," said the northerner. "Gauged by the square foot of floor area in the room I occupy, it is the highest priced hotel in America. It is run on the principle that all a visitor to your city requires is a bed, a pretense for a bathroom and a pitcher of ice water."

Immediately showered with congratulations. However, the picture show was not yet over. There was one more picture, two hearts with an arrow piercing both, which read "Two hearts that beat as one."

Directly following this, the bride-elect was presented with a box of lovely roses of every variety, which were sent from the bridegroom-to-be. Various toasts were also given her by Mrs. Rosser Lane and Miss Annie Lee. The bride-elect is the popular and attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Parrish, of this city. She is a young lady of many lovable traits and has many friends throughout the state. Mr. Ridenhour is a young druggist connected with the Byrd Drug company, of this city, and has made many friends since coming here about a year ago from Greensboro.

HOME COMING DAY WILL BE CELEBRATED NOVEMBER 22-23 (Special to Daily News.)

Greensboro, Nov. 19.—"Home coming day" which will be celebrated at the Orphan home here next Tuesday and Wednesday, November 22-23, will mark a new epoch in Odd Fellowship in North Carolina.

This event inaugurated by Grand Master L. W. Moore, of Wilmington, and Grand Secretary John D. Berry, of Raleigh, is planned as an annual occasion to bring together Odd Fellows from every section of the state that they may fraternize one with the other, see the happy children in the great institution they are maintaining and rededicate themselves to the glorious and unselfish principles of the order.

An elaborate banquet will be a feature. This event will be held Tuesday evening from 6 to 8 o'clock in the dining room of the home and will be prepared and served by the girls of the home.

In connection with this event there will be a degree demonstration, in which four lodges of the Goldsboro district will participate.

Rich Handsome Furs
Beautiful Scarfs and Exquisite Coats

Monday we will make an exceptional display of furs, embracing a superb lot of Scarfs and genuine Hudson Seal coats. The scarfs include Fox, Wolf, Lynnx, Skunk, Red Fox, Raccoon, etc., and they are all of the finest grade. Prices are very reasonable, in fact to close out this lot, which was especially consigned, we are sacrificing the usual percentages of profit.

The Fur Coats were consigned and we must sell them immediately or ship back. They are priced very close, in fact this is an opportunity to buy a handsome coat at almost wholesale prices. In the lot are six Hudson seal coats, with either squirrel or Beaver collar and cuffs, a very striking Marmot with Raccoon collar and cuffs and a beautiful Muskrat with Sealine collar and cuffs. These coats are undoubtedly the best values that will be offered in Greensboro. The Hudson coats would ordinarily sell for $600—you can buy them here now at about half this price.

MISS HILDA PARRISH AND D. G. RIDENHOUR TO WED

Engagement Announced at Pretty Party in Smithfield—The Wedding Will Occur January 18. (Special to Daily News.)

Smithfield, Nov. 19.—One of the season's most attractive and unique parties was given here Thursday evening from 8 until 11:30 by Mrs. Lee Sanders and Miss Annie Lee to announce the engagement of Miss Hilda Parrish to D. G. Ridenhour, both of this city. The home of Miss Lee was beautifully arranged for the occasion, yellow and white chrysanthemums and potted plants being used throughout the house.

Received at the door were Mrs. R. S. Edmondson, Mrs. Lee Sanders, and Miss Annie Lee. Miss Bessie Lee greeted in the cloak room. At this door were Mrs. J. W. Setzer and Mrs. W. F. Grimes. The guests were shown into the living room by Mrs. W. L. Fuller and Mrs. Rosser Lane. After the guests had arrived, rook was played at seven tables.

About 10:30 o'clock the guests were invited into the dining room. The color scheme here was white and green, lighted candles were used extensively about the room. On the dining table was a lovely silver basket containing beautiful white chrysanthemums tied with yellow tulle. On each corner of the table was a lighted candle, which cast a soft glow about the room. Chicken salad, pickles, beaten biscuits, sandwiches, coffee and whipped cream, mints and malaga grapes were served by Mrs. Sanders. Mrs. Edmondson, Mrs. Lane, and the Misses Lee. After this, the guests were invited back into the living room. The chairs were arranged for the guests to be seated so as to witness a picture show. After a while, the door was opened and framed in the doorway was a white screen board around with small, yellow chrysanthemums which made a lovely frame. The first picture was a basket of chrysanthemums, which represented autumn. The next was a basket of autumn leaves, which represented the winter. Then was flashed on the screen, these words: "Autumn leaves, but Cupid stays." By this time, the guests had arrived at a point that their curiosity could not be suppressed. The next picture was of a bride and bridegroom, posed by Joe Mice Grantham and little Miss Mildred Edmondson. Following this, was a picture of Master Hyman Sanders, as Cupid, holding a large heart. He then entered the room and carried the heart to Miss Lallah Rook Stephenson. Upon opening it, she found it full of small silver hearts tied with yellow ribbon which read: "D. G. R.—H. A. P. January 18, 1922." At last the secret was out, and the radiant bride-to-be was
