the board and the people whose dona-tions make its work possible at the Christmas season, the board will re-member those in Greensboro and the teinity.

The board does not give Christmas dimers, that being the province of the Salvation army it does give groceries, fruit, ciothing, cieth, can and wood and some toys for the children. It plans its work alorg ulitarian dren. It plans its work alors ulitarian lines, seeking to alleviate distress and furnish a bit of Christma cheer at the same time.

What is Christmas without a first was one question that Mrs. Sterie asked yesterday. Still, there will be people without even a handful of coals to shiver over, while others pay homage to the King in pleasant steam heated houses, unless the warm take time, just a few minutes, to remember their unfortunate brothers and sisters, time to remember little undereind, shivering children. Mrs. Storne is strong for warmth on the Christmas day.

Storne is strong for warmth on the Christmas day.
There are few things more acceptable to a girl than fresh, new gingman cloth nor to the woman than warm outing—where the girl or the woman has nothing like that, Mrs. Storne said. There is really no gift more acceptable than a new pair of shoen in time of sleet and shahwhere the old footwear has worn past all serviceability. Mrs. Sterne and the board believe in clothing the needy, and those things are not so costly. board believe in clothing the needy.
And those things are not so costly.
They are easily purchasable, provided one who has a warm overcoat and furs and all that will just take a few minotes and do a little hard thinking and little quick action.

There are old women, who have seen tany Christmas come and go, Mrs terns said, some of them happy one when they did not give the warmth giving qualities of the clothes they were a thought. It wasn't necessary, but now Christmas is not so happy for them and a bit of clothing, a piece outing, a simple, cheap dress makes istmas really Christmas to them. Of course the board and Mrs. Sterne know that nobody can really be hap-by if they are hungry. For that reathey see that the needy have some thing that will last for several days-bread, for example, canned goods, meat, plain food that appeals to peo-ple who really never have enough of it. For that reason groceries of all inds are very acceptable. Besides that, he children are given fruit and the ittle knicknacks that go with Christ-

man. Toys, provided they are not disrep trays, provided they are not using that depends upon a spring to run and that had its spring snapped about 16 menths ago should not be sent Even the poor little children know the diference. But there are many toys that hildren have outgrown that are fairly good shape. They can be

The hoard, of course wants money. Mrs. Sterne has not set any figure. All we can get," she said. As has been stated before, the board got over $1.700 last year for the poor at Christmas. It should receive more this year. Times are not as flush as they were last year and more people are in need. There is more distress to be alleviated; more homes to go, to; more stomachs to try to fill for once. Also, it is supposed that when people are not so prosperous themselves they are quicker to recognize the needs of others.

In addition to money, Mrs. Sterne would like to get all the groceries that anybody feels like giving, things like The board, of course wants money

Mrs Sterne makes it clear that it is the people of Greensbero who will is the people of Greensbero who will have to furnish these things. She and the beard of welfare are only the agents of the people bere. Without a generous response to her appeal she cannot do anything. And she has faith in them. It is rather extraordinary, that faith. Talking to her one does not eatch a single note of worry or irritation lest there be suffering because of a lack of generous; It may be that donations come in slowly, but—"They will not forget. They will remember? She has an immense amount of confidence in the size of the leart of Greensbero. It would not do go to above that confidence, it would not heart of Greensboro. It would not do to abose that confidence, it would not be fair to those who would be thankful for just "the crumbs from the table" of the fortunate, from those to whom Christmas means something, whose children do not have to trust to the generosity of others.

Other gifts of a heavier nature may be carried to her office, on the third floor of the courthouse, or if she is notified the board will send for them. Christmas eye is only 11 days distant and those whose hearts are not granite should waste no time.
