"John Smith" At Imperial
 "John Smith" is coming. He is bound for this city packed in a can of film and is sure to arrive in the best of condition. While here, he will make his headquarters at the Imperial theater, where you can meet him today and tomorrow.

"John Smith" was created for Seizick by Victor Heertram, and he stars Eugene O'Brien, who needs very little introduction. He is a man of a great deal of strength of character, who fights with two fists and makes love as nice as you please.

Lovely Mary Astor heads the supporting cast, which also includes George Fawcett, Vivian Ogden, Barney Sherry, Frankie Mann and others. The story of "John Smith" was both written and directed by Victor Heertram. Other attractions on the same program include a Pathe Review and a comedy entitled "Soak the Sheik."

starring Viola Dana, will be the featured attraction of the National beginning today. It is a comedy that combines where most pictures leave off—at the altar. Clytie Whitmore is being married, but she doesn't like the idea. The bridegroom has a six-cipher fortune, and the society reporters compiling the roster of those present, Clytie trips, falls, and gets a black eye. It is providential, for it gives her the impetus to break away and make a dash for liberty just as the officiating minister begins to wind up his delivery.

All rush after her—friends, relatives, mamma, witnesses, ushers, the clergyman—but Clytie makes a clean getaway, aided by a handsome young jazz orchestra leader who balances her in his arms. And now the fun commences. When Clytie gets home they make her a prisoner, but not for very long. Again she is on a rampage, leading everybody a merry chase, disturbing the cat-in-the-hat, and making the neighbors believe that when June madness comes, anything may happen, even to the throwing of a million-dollar fish back into the pond.

Added attractions include the latest "Keaton" comedy, "The Electric House," and Screen Snapshots.
