support of the work of the near east relief.

"The most awful page in the history of civilization" was the way Bishop Cannon described the treatment accorded the Armenian Christians. The allies pledged themselves to protect the Armenians, he said, and then stood by idly while the Turka slaughtered them by the thousands. "I did not know such things could happen." he said, teiling of what he had seen and heard on a recent trip to the near east. "Even now I wask up at night some time and wonder if what I saw can really be true. But it is true and I did see it, the most horrible nightmare come true that any person can imagine.

"Why did these things happen?" he asked. "Simply because these people are Christians. There is no other reason. We in this country have so much prosperity, so much liberty, so much freedom to be, to live, to think, to act, that we cannot understand, we cannot grasp, what is going on in the near east.

Creed, Experience and Life In Order Given.

A powerful indictment of what he termed America's failure to keep her promise to Armenia, an arraignment of the Turks and a heart-rending picture of near east atrocities were made yesterday afternoon at the Grand theater by Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of Virginia, speaking in support of the work of the near east relief.

"The most awful page in the history of civilization" was the way Bishop Cannon described the treatment accorded the Armenian Christ-ment accorded the Armenian Ch

of the 26th verse of the 11th chapter ter of Acts: "And the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch."

Antioch was one of the three great ities in which the foundation cities in which the foundations of Christianity were laid, the others being Rome and Jerusalem. It was pointed out that Antioch then had a population about equal to the present population of Paris. Many of the people of Antioch were highly ingenious, and it was in an ingenious mood that one of the inhabitants coined the term Christian. It was significant. Dr. Ramphardt held these significant. Dr. Ramphardt held these significant, Dr. Barnhardt held, that the word was bestowed by an out-sider; in fact, it originated in jest, as a term of derision. The author of the term little thought that in the years to come it would prove badge of which its wearers would be proud.

In that connection the preacher declared that persecution has never imperiled the church of God, but, on the other hand, it has served as an the other hand, it has served as an incentive to good works. The great danger to the church pomes from smooth operations rather than from persecution and trouble. Further-more, "The permanent purposes of God for the establishment of His kingdom on earth cannot be defeat-

The fact that Christ was the cen trai figure of their religion was doubtless largely responsible for in-ception of the word Christian, Dr. Earnhardt said, adding that the groundwork of the Christian religion is a man, an individual, not a book or a form. Then it was a distinctive term, too, evidencing the fact that the Christians were separated from other groups and from the world.

Referring to creed as the first es Referring to creed as the first es-sential of Christianity, the speaker declared that people must "believe something." He declared it is now fashionable to scoff at creeds, but maintained that they are highly es-sential. Creed embodies vital doc-trine; the man who believes on God has the right foundation. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he," he quoted. "This scientific influence. man thinketh in his heart, so is he," he quoted. "This scientific influenza," said Dr. Barnhardt in reference to the popular attitude of contemptuous regard for creeds, "will pass, but the constellation of Revelation will stand." The latter is fix d and invincible. The profound thinkers have been the world's great men. Experience also is an integral part of Christianity. Properly, religion
