

SWISS CHEESE IS NOW MADE IN NORTH STATE

Co-Operative Factory in Watauga County Started Last Year Proves a Success

IS SOURCE OF REVENUE

Raleigh, Dec. 20.—Swiss cheese, with the regulation eyes and tears, now is being manufactured in North Carolina.

To date, it is only being done in an experimental way by the dairy specialists of the State college and department of agriculture, but the outlook is bright for the new industry to become firmly established, according to F. H. Jeter, editor of the department.

This new industry for the state was begun last year at the Cove Creek Co-operative Cheese factory in Watauga county, he said. It has long been known that the mountain areas of North Carolina were ideally suited to the manufacture of cheese. Since the movement was begun in a small way over there in 1915 by experts of the experimental station and extension service, there has been a steady increase in the number of factories being built until about 20 were established.

"But all these factories were for the manufacture of cheddar or cream cheese. In the last year or two, the market for this kind of cheese has not been so good and the farmers were not getting enough returns from such milk as was made up in this way. Consequently, some of the co-operative factories began to lose their earlier popularity.

"Seeing this, the office of dairy farming under the direction of J. A. Gray began experimenting with cheese of higher quality. L. H. Wilson, of the United States department of agriculture, was secured to begin experimenting with Swiss cheese.

"It was found that conditions were ideal for the manufacture of this kind and soon experimental cheese was turned out for curing and testing. The quality was good, but there were too many eyes or holes. Now, the dairy specialists have eliminated these extra holes, and state that the cheese is as good as any made in Switzerland and marketed in this country.

"Mr. Gray states that by adding a newly discovered culture to get the eyes of the cheese, a majority of those manufacturers at Cove Creek are number one product. This is not true of the Swiss cheese manufactured in Europe, since only about 40 per cent of their manufacture is number one quality. However, the Swiss only send their best cheese over here, and Mr. Gray states he is delighted that North Carolina-made cheese is ranking with the best quality coming over here.

"Mr. Gray further states that Swiss cheese is bringing about 40 cents per pound now and that cheddar cheese is marketing at about twenty six cents at the mountain factories. He finds that the Swiss cheese then is returning a third more money for the milk sent in by the co-operative farmers.

"Some Swiss cheese now is being made in Ohio and Pennsylvania, but this is the first attempt to bring the industry to the south.

"With the excellent conditions for manufacturing existing in the mountain areas of North Carolina, however, there is no reason why the new industry should not grow into a large and lucrative business," he said.

KINSTON UNION STATION MAY SOON BE STARTED

Actual Construction Expected to Commence Shortly After January 1.

TOWN HAS WAITED LONG

Kinston, Dec. 20.—Construction of the union passenger station here, hanging fire nearly a decade, will be started within a few weeks, possibly immediately after January 1, it was stated today. The information was regarded as official, and was from Norfolk Southern sources. Nothing had been heard at the Atlantic Coast Line offices here. Facts and figures regarding the structure were not available, but it was understood that a "building in keeping with the importance of the town and the traffic entering it" would be erected.

Kinston has waited nearly a decade for the station. There have been numerous petitions to and delegations before the corporation commission from the chamber of commerce. Orders have been issued, extended, conferred over and discussed, but until the union station episode has become a whole chapter in local history. Footscap enough to stock a wholesale stationer's shop has been wasted on the station matter.

Col. W. B. Rodman, Norfolk Southern chief counsel, was today quoted as saying actual work might be started by January 1. Information from other sources did not indicate the date. It was believed the structure could be completed by early summer. The site, a short walk from the business district, was cleared years ago. It is of triangular shape. The station will be flanked by tracks and lateral tiled sheds. There will be other tracks in the rear. In the front will be an open plaza.

Shipman Will Not Draft the Workers' Compensation Bill

Raleigh, Dec. 20.—A statement that he had not drawn up a workmen's compensation bill to be presented to the general assembly in January, but is leaving such action to representatives of labor and manufacturers in the state, was issued today by M. L. Shipman, commissioner of labor.

"In my recommendations to the governor and general assembly," said Mr. Shipman, "I outlined the principles of a workmen's compensation act, but I have not drawn up a bill and do not intend to do so. It is my purpose to let the parties most interested in the matter prepare their own measure or measures."

Mr. Shipman's statement was issued, he said, in order to correct the impression created by the publication of an account outlining the legislative program of the North Carolina Federation of Labor in which it was stated the organization would not support the bill the commissioner had prepared.

204 North Elm Across From Grand Theater

By the Carolina and the Kinston-Carolina, short lines having termini here and subsidiary to the Norfolk Southern, as well as the latter road and the Atlantic Coast Line. It will replace three antiquated stations in various parts of the city. The most pretentious of these is the Norfolk Southern, a stucco "edifice" of rather unusual architecture, small dimensions and leaky. The Norfolk Southern may eventually have to establish a stop in West Kinston in addition to the union station. Passengers have been without shelter in rainy weather when passing from stations to trains flanked by the main tracks of the Atlantic Coast line and Norfolk Southern, and comparatively little additional trackage will be laid. Ground for this, lying to the front of the station site, has been in litigation several years. The Norfolk Southern a few years ago acquired some additional ground in the vicinity.
