One Man Is Killed and Another Wounded by State Prohibition Officers. Mob Resents Action of the Prohibition Agents.

Winchester, Va., March 27.—Following a night of threatened mob violence and intense excitement in Winchester, caused by the killing of Herman Stenger, leader of the extreme wing of the T. D. Hugger state prohibition agents, the situation there today was reported to be improved.

Last night it was announced that the local Winchesteans had voted to let it alone and made less noise.

State Prohibition Commissioner J. S. Davis, who had gone to Washington yesterday to argue his case before the Senate, was with his agents in the hot locality. The threatening note, which had advised it would take the lives of the agents, disappeared about 2 o'clock this morning.

No shots were fired into the building, although several hand-loaded stones were thrown.

A vessel Sharkeford was found with two revolvers, their parts shot, scattered in the abandoned smelting plant. It was believed that Sharp-Tail and Shrike, British former Prohibitionsmen, had got a chance to fight in their old haunts, but did not do so.
