FIGHTERS' STATISTICS
New York, June 23.—George Carpentier, challenger of Jack Dempsey, will be smaller, stronger, respectively, than his opponent in the fight for the world's heavyweight championship on Monday night at Madison Square Garden.
Dempsey will be longer, thicker, heavier, and will have two more years of experience. Carpentier is younger, will be in his world-famous, decorated boxing ring in 14 months. The Frenchman is regarded as being 5 feet 11 inches tall, with a chest measurement of 42 1/2 inches. Dempsey's measurements are 5 feet 10 inches tall, with a chest measurement of 42 inches.
Dempsey will outweigh Carpentier by about twenty pounds. He will stand one and one-half inches taller. He will outweigh his rival by one inch, 7 1/2 inches to 2 1/2. In weight and middle development they are nearly equal, only a fraction of an inch giving Dempsey the advantage in reach. Dempsey's boxing gloves weigh 14 1/2 inches. Carpentier's gloves weigh 14 1/2 inches. Carpentier's back muscles, however, are a magnitude of his development and from this he will draw most of his strength.
In several respects, Jess Willard, the Kansas City champion, looked out for Carpentier, was the largest champion in several other respects, the more compact Jim Jeffries out-stripped Willard easily. Willard, the champion, was not declared as likely to be a physical way as several others who have held the title.
Willard, at fighting weight, scaled 230 pounds and towered 6 feet in the air. His reach of 81 1/2 inches was greater than that of other title holders. His chest measurement of 49 inches normal, was seven inches less than that of "Jeff" Jeffries' chest, neck, biceps and middle development was greater than that of Willard and Willard's chest measurements were only a fraction of an inch larger than Jeffries'.
