Wavure, simplitity and tendernesp are well som. THE MOURNER.
HENCEI cruel life, no more perist, When $H z x x^{\prime}$ 'selay toold hand 1 kissid When Hzxir's clay-celt hadn How welcome, death, Speechless, they say, benumb'd lseem'd, While hiit latp precious brachit 1 caught
No tears to soothe my No tears to soothe min yorrows sht
And agony supended thought.

They tell me, thunders rent the air; That vividilightnings fash'd aroun
But Ibebleld noligutring's's But tbehecld no ligutring's glare,
Nor heard the pedling thunder sound

They tell me, that ny helpless chid, 1 from my artho with fury tosid, It might be so, for 1 was wild,

They tell me on thr unconssious corso, They tell me on th unconscion

But happy state resembling Zeath,
 For I can only live to moan.
E'en reason saya I justly weep,
My midnightit couch with tears I t teep. Then rise at mopen to weep againi
When to my heart my child fold, Sthe only deepens yerery sigh; How she'd have pleased her father'sege.
And when $T$ from her tisping tongue, Soff childhood's arless accents hear, Ithing, with vain remembrance wrung',
Hows she'd have charmed ber father'seas
Ithink, but O forbear, Tonat heart! From vain regress od dutiex turn Yes I mill act a paren's part.
III tear my yelf from Hewar's urn.

In lifet tithl one charm can see; One flower adorns that dreary wild: That Bower for care depends on me,
O precious charga! 'tis HzMRs's Child.
