

DISCORD—AN ODE.

WHAT form is yon with fiery eyes,
That on the rapid whirlwind flies?
A bloody spear her hand sustains,
With racks, and wheels, and galling chains;
Grim lowers her brow, with dire intent
On mischief, blood, and slaughter bent:
Her flight, which quite out strips the wind,
Leaves heavenly Reason far behind.
Pity, dejected, views afar
The fury rushing to the war;
While Mercy with an aspect sweet,
Lies groaning 'neath the monster's feet!
High blazes red the torturing fire,
Where truth and innocence expire;
While hellish shouts and clangors rise,
To drown the wretched victim's cries:
Too well the fiend is known to fame,
In every clime, by many a name;
Fell DISCORD hot from burning hell,
Who fell when heaven's bright legions fell;
And sally'd from the shades below,
To work mankind eternal woe.
Say, could the muse of Homer count
Of thy foul deeds the vast amount;
Or he, whose hallowed harp could sing,
Of sin and death the mortal spring?
Urg'd on by thee in Eden's land,
Was lifted first the murdering hand;
When earth first drank the purple flood
Of murther'd Abel's guiltless blood;
Which smoking to the pitying skies,
Loudly for heavenly vengeance cries;
With multiplying man, the rage
For slaughter burn'd from age to age;
Who planning cities fix the bounds,
And claiming part disputed grounds;
Divided tribes appear in arms,
Loud rings the region with alarms.
Out at the peaceful midnight hour,
When balmy sleep's refreshing power
O'er all the slumbering town prevails,
Horror the affrighted ear assails,
From bursting roofs foul smoke and fire,
In columns to the clouds aspire;
While factions hell-engendered crew,
Exult transported at the view.

On hapless Europe's ample plains,
At large the infernal fury reigns;
Virtue she humbles in the dust,
To satiate cruelty and lust.
See husbands from their consorts torn;
See children left their sires to mourn.
The valiant youth, the tender maid,
Doom'd to the axe or murdering blade.
Wild screams of ravish'd virgins here,
Driven by her curs'd malignant band,
Pity dejected flies the land;
Justice disclaim'd in haste recedes,
And virtue prostituted bleeds;
Religion, offspring of the skies,
Trod in the dust, insulted lies.

Oh, never may this demon be,
Happy Columbia, found with thee;
Oh, may she ne'er thy sons entice,
To listen to her syren voice;
Whose base suggestions can impart,
Black poison to the human heart;
And quick as lightning fire the mind,
To damn the peace of all mankind.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 5.

We have authority for stating, that on the first notice to the British government of the conduct of captain Bradley in the harbour of New-York, it was signified to our minister in London, that the Lords Commissioners of the British Admiralty, highly disapproving that conduct, had given orders for the immediate removal of capt. Bradley from the command of the Cambrian, and for his returning to England to answer for his proceedings.

AN ACT

Making a further appropriation for carrying into effect the treaty of amity, commerce and navigation, between his Britannic Majesty and the United States of America.

BE it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, That a sum not exceeding seventy thousand dollars, be and the same hereby is appropriated, to be paid under the direction of the President of the United States out of any monies in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purpose of carrying into effect the seventh article of the treaty of amity, commerce and navigation between his Britannic Majesty and the United States of America.

NATHL. MACON,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

A. BURR,

Vice-President of the United States, and President of the Senate.

APPROVED,

TH: JEFFERSON.

NORFOLK, November 27.

Capt. Wills arrived here on Saturday in the sch'r Seventy-six, from Teneriffe, in forms, that just before he sailed, the packet had arrived there from Cadiz, and had brought accounts of an earthquake having happened at that place, which had done much damage. The inhabitants of the island of Majorca and Minorca, had revolted, and had declared they would no longer hold themselves amenable to the Spanish government. At Malaga, disturbances of a serious nature had taken place. It having been deemed necessary to blockade the city, both by land and sea, to prevent the spreading of the fever raging there, the inhabitants, reduced to desperation from the want of provisions, attacked the blockading troops, and defeated them with great slaughter.

Captain Hiller, of the Antelope, (arrived at New-York) informs that when he left Lisbon, the American frigate Essex, captain Barron, had arrived there, and had been put under quarantine. Two Moorish ships were lying in the Tagus, one of them was of 36 guns, the other 18; they were badly manned, and were taking in a supply of provisions and stores. As their designs were not known, the Essex was to remain there to watch their motions.

Charleston, Dec. 3

A letter from Columbia states, that there will be an election for two Senators in Congress, as general Sumter's time expires in March, and Major Butler has resigned. Paul Hamilton, Esq. is the only person spoken of as Governor. It is generally thought that a stop will be put to the importation of Africans, this session.

A report of a very distressing nature, (says an Albany paper, Nov. 3.) has reached us from Niagara: that Judge Cartwright, and a number of the principal judicial officers of the Upper Canada, a short time since, on their passage from Kingston to York, where a court was to be held for the trial of a Messauga Indian for murder, have all perished—no information having been received of them for ten or fifteen days after their sailing, and parts of a wreck having been discovered on the lake, which it was feared was the unfortunate vessel which they were on board of.

Our accounts from the Mediterranean add fresh attestations to the valor and conduct of our seamen. The bombardment of Tripoli has commenced under circumstances that promise full and brilliant success. Commodore Preble has seized the earliest opportunity of reducing by force the pirates to a sense of justice. His arrangements, so far as they appear, have been judicious, and have been crowned with great success. The regular dispatches have none, we are advised, been yet received by the secretary of the navy.—But we are authorized to state, on the ground of corroborating information, the contents of the letters, received at Philadelphia, to be authentic. The force engaged in the bombardment is not stated. It is probable, however, that the whole under the command of the commodore was engaged. The Squadron previous to the late equipment, consisted of the frigate Constitution, commanded by commodore Preble, of two brigs, three schooners, six gun-boats, carrying each a twenty-four pounder, and two mortar boats. To oppose our force, Tripoli had fourteen gun-boats of the same capacity with ours, her fortifications, and several vessels, incapable of serious resistance. Of the gun-boats, three are taken, and three sunk.—

The decisive blow, therefore, with regard to her naval armaments, is struck, by destroying nearly one half of its strength.—The energy of the commodore will next be directed against the fortifications, which are represented to be already injured, although the degree of injury is not stated. Every day's mail may be expected to bring us intelligence of the full infliction of an adequate punishment on the Bey, of the restoration of peace, and, we hope, of the liberation of our captive citizens.
