It was on the 15th January he got information of the escape of the squadron—the heavy gales having obliged him to go into Quiberon Bay. On the 24th he was off Ushant,

Extract of a letter from Lisbon, dated Feb. 12.
“We have just sold two cargoes of flour of 2,500 bbls. each, one at 15 dollars another at 15 dollars and a half per bbl on board. Cadix and St. Lucar are now formally blockaded; and several ships which have been turned off have come in here. This may procure us some supplies, but can hardly affect our prices, as the Spaniards, who are almost starving, will find means to get some part of it over land, the moment we can spare any.”

“There is nothing new in our political situation. Every thing is as quiet here as if there was no war, and hopes are entertained that we shall be suffered to remain so. The English have sent in several Spanish prizes, which were immediately ordered out again.”

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Calcutta, to his friend in Hartford, Connecticut, dated October 27, 1804.

“The Princess Charlotte is taken in Vezagapatam, by the Marengo and two large frigates, which the Centurion, of fifty guns, engaged for three hours and a half, and beat off. Monsieur Sourcues is in the Bay, and seven or eight privateers—they have taken several large ships. Things bear a very cloudy aspect here, the Mahratta war turns out quite different from what Lord Wellesley expected. One king's and five company's regiments, under the command of general Morrison have been completely cut to pieces; and accounts are in town [Calcutta] this morning of the grand army under general Lake, having had a bloody day; of one regiment of light dragoons, only one officer, and about fifty men survived. They find the native cavalry equal to the British dragoons. The particulars of the engagement government will not fish. Company's paper five to eight per cent. discount. One of the largest houses failed for forty-five lack of rupees. European goods very high in price.”

A London paper states that Buonaparte is about to cross the Alps a second time. His Mamelukes and his body guards had already left Paris. The sole avowed purpose of the journey is the elevation of his brother to the throne of Lombardy, which has been offered by a deputation of the Italian republic. It is however believed that his intention is to put himself at the head of his army to attack and break the Austrian condition of troops already the subject of diplomatic discussion. For some time troops have been filing off from the eastern and southern parts of France. The Italian troops at Boulogne and along the western coast of France are understood to have returned to Italy. The belief is, that Buonaparte finding a war with Austria inevitable, means, according to his custom, to strike the first blow. That he intends to drive the Austrians from the Venetian possessions and annex them to his brother Joseph's kingdom of Lombardy. Anticipation goes further, and states, that in this kingdom of Lombardy, will be merged, the republics of Liguria and Lucca, the kingdom of Etruria, and even the territories of the church, (his Holiness being elsewhere provided for.) Naples, it is added, will be the last part of Italy annexed to the Lombardy kingdom in this gigantic plan. Some extraordinary circumstances are mentioned, but obscurely, respecting the kingdom of Etruria. The banishment of the Etrurian minister and some domestics of the palace, among others a cook belonging to the queen and the infant king of Etruria. No particulars are given.

The London Morning Chronicle of Feb. 2, says “A cabinet council was held at the queen's house, at two o'clock on Thursday; Lord Sidmouth had a very long audience of his majesty before that council; and Lord Hawkesbury enjoyed the same honor, for near half an hour after the council; but neither Mr. Pitt nor Lord Melville attended that council; nor did they see his majesty; and we will venture further to add, that the reasons which have impeded the usual communications between his majesty and his first minister, and which was referred to in Mr. Pitt's letter to his majesty, on the subject of the conduct of the archbishop of Canterbury, remained yesterday unsettled and unexplained.”

“A variety of circumstances appear to indicate the immediate resignation of Lord Melville and of Mr. Pitt; and their friends have decidedly expressed their hopes that they will no longer submit to their present humiliation.”

SAVANNAH, March 11.

From the long continued cold which has prevented the northern vessels arriving, provisions generally have reached a very high price. Flour particularly has become very scarce. Twenty dollars a barrel have been given for it, and it is probable a still higher price will be asked if a considerable supply does not soon arrive.

Having received from Commodore Preble, information that the Neapolitan government cannot possibly spare to Commodore Barron, any of their gun-boats for the ensuing summer, the Secretary of the Navy has issued orders for the equipping of ten gun-boats, to leave the United States, so as to join our squadron in the Mediterranean about the 1st of July. Owing to the violent gales of wind that usually prevail on the coast of Tripoli before the month of July, gun boats cannot be used to advantage, or even with safety, before that period.
