To Printers of Newspapers.

THERE will speedily be issued from the press, a "History of Printing in America," &c. which among other things, will contain an account of all the Newspapers printed in British America, previous to the commencement of the revolution in 1775; and the author wishes to add a list of all the Newspapers printed in the United States, as well as in the British, French and Spanish dominions, on this continent; and in the West-Indies, on the first day of January, 1810.

With a view to enable him to complete this list, he requests the printers of newspapers will do him the favor to forward one or two of their papers, addressed to "G. T. Printer, Worcester, Mass."—And in order that this intelligence may become generally known, he begs they will give this advertisement one or two insertions in their respective papers, which will be considered as an additional obligation. If such publishers of newspapers, or other gentlemen as have newspapers printed in British or Spanish America, on the 1st of January, will do him the favor to forward one of each kind, as above, they will render him a very acceptable service. It is intended to insert in the History of Printing, (above mentioned), the titles of the papers, the names of the printers, the towns and states in which they are printed, and the periods of their publication, as daily, weekly, &c.

Publishers of Magazines and periodical works, other than newspapers, are also requested to favor the author with the title of such publications, the name of the publishers, and an account of the periods when, and the places where, they are printed.

May 25.

NOTICE.

THE Subscribers being desirous of balancing all their accounts annually, to correct any omissions or overcharges that might unintentionally occur from their too long standing; request all persons to whom they may be indebted to present their accounts for settlement. JACOB LEVY.

June 5.

FRESH GOODS.

Just received and now opening at my store, in Market Street, next door below Mr. William Mitchell's, a well selected supply of SEASONABLE GOODS, which I will sell low for cash only.

The small capital to which I have been restricted, in the prosecution of my business, renders it indispensable that I should at all times possess it in some form or other, to that end I have determined, and have for some years adhered to the determination of keeping a real cash store; I had hoped this circumstance was so generally known that the pain of denying credit at this time would have been completely obviated; this not being the case, and the unpleasantness of refusing it, frequently to persons of whose ability and punctuality there can be no doubt, and with whom, were my plan of business different, it would give me peculiar pleasure to have accounts, induces me earnestly to request the discontinuance of all such applications in future.

JESSE WINGATE.

Who also keeps a general assortment of Groceries of the best quality; among which are genuine Madeira and Sherry Wines.

June 5.

The bonds of the purchasers at the sale of Thomas Jennings's personal Estate, became due on the 1st Instant.—Those not paid on or before the 1st of July, 1810, will be put in suit.

N. HILL, JOHN HOGG, Executors.

May 14.

To Printers.

FIFTY DOLLARS REWARD, If taken out of the State, will be given for apprehending and delivering at this Office, T. WILLIAM ANDERSON, an apprentice to the Printing business. He is between seventeen and eighteen years of age, small of stature, speaks very well, and is a tolerably correct compositor. It is conjectured that he is gone with his step-father Mr. E. J. Pearson, to New-York, where it is likely he may attempt to gain employment in some Office.—About three or four years since he lived with a Mr. Haly, a Druggist in Swanton, Vermont. The Druggist should be sold if taken within this State, and his above reward of Fifty Dollars if taken out of the State. On follow east through the United States, are requested to infer the above a few times.

Letters on French Influence,

(Written by Mr. Elliot, once a Republican member of Congress from the State of Vermont.)

INC. IV.

To the people of the United States. Having established the point that the president of the U. States has no constitutional right to impose an injunction of secrecy upon the two houses of congress, or either of them, in any case whatever, it is now proper to enquire into the power of those houses to lay such an injunction upon their own members.

The only power vested in the two branches of the national legislature, by the constitution, which bears upon this subject, is contained in the third paragraph of the fifth section of the first article of the constitution, which article establishes and defines the legislative functions. "Each house shall keep a Journal of its proceedings; and, from time to time, publish the same, excepting such parts as may in their judgment require secrecy; and the yeas and nays of the members of either house, on any question, shall at the desire of one fifth of those present be entered on the Journal." This paragraph is naturally connected with that which goes before it. "Each house may determine the rules of its proceedings; punish its members for disorderly behaviour; and with the concurrence of two thirds, expel a member." The provision in the present constitution respecting a secret journal, appears to have been in some measure derived from the 7th section of the ninth article of the old confederation of the states. "The congress of the U. States shall have power to adjourn at any time within the year, and to any place within the U. States so that no period of adjournment be for a longer duration than the space of six months, and shall publish the Journal of their proceedings monthly, except such parts thereof relating to treaties, alliances, or military operations, as in their judgment require secrecy; and the yeas and nays of the delegates of each state on any question shall be entered on the Journal, when it is desired by any delegate; and the delegates of the state, or any of them, at his or their request shall be furnished with a transcript of the said Journal, except such parts as are above excepted, to lay before the legislatures of the several states."

As the old congress possessed the power of peace and war, with only a mere shadow of legislative powers generally, and the power of making treaties, now vested in the president and senate exclusively, the provision which has just been quoted from the articles of confederation, appears to have been adopted with a view to the exercise of those powers upon the subjects of "treaties, alliances and military operations," and upon no other subjects. As it was the object of "The People," in establishing the new constitution, to form a more perfect union, by the organization of a more energetic system of government, a power was given to each house to withhold from publication such parts of their proceedings as they should deem proper. But when we consider that the powers in reference to the exercise of which, under the confederation, secrecy was allowed, were divided in the new constitution, the power of making treaties and alliances being vested in the senate (legisla-
