SUMMARY—From the Salem Register.

Since our last we have no great military events.

The delay is not explicable on the ground of peace.

As regards the late proceedings, a few Junta have given a more definite view of their power.

And the journals which were expressed in Portugal have been thought to have existed in Spain.

When these were begun in the republication of military power, events will explain should an active campaign soon open.

In France the power of the Emperor appears undiminished.

He has not greater sovereignty in his army than he appears to possess in the domestic and ecclesiastical affairs of the Empire.

From Regnaud's report of the Emperor for 1811, and the nature of the survey of the Empire, by actual measurement of every part, and every division of territory, it is remarked, that the Emperor has every day a command as much as every soldier of his own troops.

In his ecclesiastical affairs he is not less absolute, but he experiences less obsequiousness to his will in the constituted members of the ecclesiastical hierarchy, though he is not devoid of their power.

Some ecclesiastics who have lately been removed, intend to be under the protection of the Emperor, or to state the loss of their brethren of the catholic communion by that Emperor have repented that the clergy, as a whole, were alarmed at the bold steps of the imperial power.

not thereby to ruin and for willing to support the other, a large majority in Rome, and in other places had withdrawn. They were also that the convocation could not succeed in its design, and therefore had been dissolved without any relaxation of his first demands. From this we see an entire change in the more than since, and that the present imperial power is maintained. When we see what changes the Emperor's power has made, had we
