NOTICE.

WHEREASa certain John Stevens, of Hoboken, did obtain from the Legislature of N Carolina, during their last session, a law granting to him the exclusive right to havigate the waters in said state with Steam Boats to the manifest prejudice of Robert Futton, Esq the inventor, and of Robert R. Livingston, Esq. his associate, in the patent granted to him by the U. States for said new and useful invention.

and whereas the said John Stevens has by an instrument in writing under his proper signature and seal, acknowledged formally, fully and unequivocally, "that the said Robert Fulton is the inventor of new and useful Steam-Boats, and the first that has shewn the superiority of water wheels over all other modes of propelling Steam-Boats, and demonstrated the relative preportions of the several parts." And whereas the said John Stevens had neither right, title, claim or authority from, or under the said Livingston and Fulton, the true and actual patentees for using and vending to others to be used within the U. states, and territories thereof, the right to unvigate with boats propelled by fire and steam and wheels, but did, boats propelled by fire and steam and wheels but did, unwarrantably and unjustifiably, apply for, and surreptitiously and by misrepresenation or otherwise, obtain said law in order to wrest, under cover thereof, from the aforesaid patenties the well earned and just reward of their ingenuity, enterprize, labor and perseverance, and thus made the state subservient (though unknowingly) to injustice which may possibly involve the patentees in tedious, troublesome and expensive suits in defending their rights from invasion by said Stevens, or any ignorant or unprincipled persons who may be seduced to join with, or uphold him in so flagitious an invasion of the rights of individuals. And whereas the said law passed as aforesaid by the state of North Carolina is not only voidable, but absolutely void and nugatory, in as much as it is in direct hostility to the law of the United states, under which the pa-tent has been granted to the said Bohert Fulton & Rob.
