NOTICE.

THOSE who have Books out belonging to the Polemic Library, are requested to return them without delay. It is hoped that this notice will be punctually attended to as it is highly necessary that all institutions of such a nature should at all times be governed systematically. It is practised too much by the Students at the end of each session, to leave town and not return the Books they have belonging to the Library; it is hoped they will desist from such conduct in future.

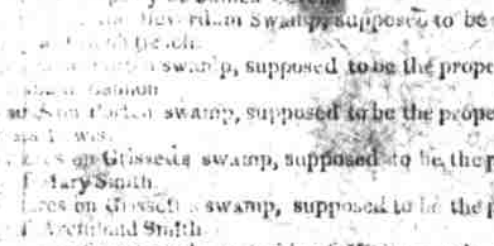
ALEXANDER ROWLAND, ANGUS TAYLOR. } Ad'mrs.



Foreign.

PARIS, Feb. 16.

The Emperor Napoleon appeared before the Legislative Body, and delivered the following speech:—

Gentlemen, the Deputies of the Legislative Body

The war rekindled in the north of Europe, offered a favorable occasion to the projects of the English upon the Peninsula. They have made great efforts which have proved abortive. Their army has fallen before the city of Burgos, and after having sustained great loss, has evacuated all Spain. I, myself, entered Prussia. The Prussian [illegible] have been overstar by victories in the fields of Ostrowo of Polotsk, of Smolensk, of Moskwa, of [illegible] cow, of Malo-Jaroslawetz, of [illegible] No part of the Russian army [illegible] No hand before our eagles [illegible] rallied into our power.

When the [illegible] Russia were [illegible] ed, and the inquiry [illegible] arms ascertained, a swarm of barbarians [illegible] their parricidal hand against the provinces of this vast Empire, which [illegible] been called to decend. [illegible] works, in spite of the cares [illegible] the unfortunate [illegible] covered under them four thousand of their [illegible] villages—[illegible] ally of their [illegible] by the [illegible] ancient and [illegible] of Moscow [illegible] have triumphed over all their efforts.

Even the conflagration of Moscow, where, in four days they have annihilated the labors and earnings of forty generations, did not at all change the prospereous state of my affairs; but the premature and excessive rigor of the winter, has thrown upon my army a most tremendous calamity. In a few nights I have seen every thing changed. I have not words to express my losses. They would be too great for my heart if under these great circumstances, I had been susceptible to any but the interests and future glory of my people.

It is with lively satisfaction that we have seen the people of the Kingdom of Italy, those of ancient Holland, and its departments are united. Inrivalship to the ancient French; and feeling that there is no hope for them in their future prosperity, but in the consolidation and triumph of the grand empire.

The agents of England propagate with all our neighbors, the spirit of revolt against sovereigns. England would now wish to see the whole continent a prey to civil war, and to all the furies of anarchy; but Providence has designed her to be the first victim of anarchy and civil war. I have just signed with the Pope an agreement which will terminate all the differences which have unhappily arisen in the Church. The French dynasty reigns and will reign in Spain. I am satisfied with the conduct of all my allies. I will not abandon them. I will maintain the integrity of their states. The Russians shall remain their frightful climate.

At the views of the evils which have fallen upon us, the joy of England has been great. Her hopes have had no bounds.—She offered our finest provinces as a recompence for treason.—She offered as a condition for peace, the dismemberment of this fine Empire. It was, in other words, to proclaim perpetual war. The energy of my people under these great incidents; their attachment to the integrity of the empire; the love they have shewn me have dissipated these chimeras; and has brought our enemies to a more just sense of things.

The misfortunes which the rigor of the climate produced, has shewn in its fullest extent, the grandeur and solidity of this Empire—founded upon the efforts and love of fifty millions of citizens; and upon the territorial resources of the finest countries of the world.

I desire peace. It is necessary to the world. Four times since the rupture which followed the treaty of Amiens, I have made solemn overtures. I will never make any but an honorable peace, and conformable to the intent and grandeur of my empire. My policy is not mysterious. I have made known the sacrifices I can make. As long as this maritime war shall continue, my people ought to hold themselves ready to make every sacrifice—for a bad peace would make us lose all, even hope; and all will be compromitted, even the welfare of our prosperity.

America has recurred to arms to cause the sovereignty of her flag to be respected. The wishes of the world accompany her in this glorious contest. If it terminates in bringing the enemy of the Continent to recognise the principle that the flag shall protect the merchandize and crew, and that neutrals ought not to submit to paper blockades (all conformable to the treaty of Utrecht,) America will merit the applause of the world. Posterity will say that the ancient world had lost its rights, and the new world hath recovered them.

My minister of interior will make known to you in the expose the situation of the empire, the prosperous state of agriculture, of manufactures and of our interior commerce, as well as the constant increase of population. In no age has agriculture and manufactures been in a higher degree of prosperity in France.

I have need of great resources to meet the expences which circumstances exact, but notwithstanding the different means which my minister of finance will propose to you, I hope not to impose any new burdens on my people.
