JUPITER AND VENUS.

These two grand luminaries of heaven, the supreme God of the heathen mythology, and the goddess of love and beauty, have'a remarkable treble conjunction as follows .- About the middle of July, Jupit r began rapidly to approach Venus from the East ; by the end of the month gets within 10 degrees of her, and by the middle of August is in full conjunction wich this beauty of the skies : Venos is at this time an horned crescent in great splendor, and three hours behind the Sun. - They now run a race toge her towards the Sun for a month or six weeks, Jupiter first taking the lead, and then waiting his companion ; about the middle. of October they are again in conjunction with each other and with the Sun. They now become morning stars. Venus emerges from ' the Sun with great celerity, f llowed by Jupiter ; she is 80 deg. a head of him the beginning of November, and 90 degrees foremost by November 15. Jupiter now begins to gain ground, and by the middle of December again approaches her ; this (as seen from the Earth) is in the sign Scorpio, the former conjunctions referred to having been in Libra. They now separate finally, and are 17 degrees apart before. the year's end, 46 degrees apart before February ; and 64 deg. asunder by Feb. 15, 1816.

HARVEST MOON.

The moon rises on an average of time, three quarters of an hour later every day. But during the full moon in September, the difference is not more than 15 or 20 minutes .---This phenomenon happening at the time of gath ring the autumnal fruits, is called the Harvest Moon. Thus, by a wise law of Providence, the husbandman is furnished with an extra quantity of light so necessary at this busy season; and, which, commencing soon after twilight, his labors scarce suffer an interruption. In the polar circles, where it is said there are six months of night, the full moon never rises in summer, when she is not wanted, nor ever sets in winter when her light is so much required. The harvest moon is proverbially the pleasantest in the year. B. paper.
