FACE YOUR TROUBLES.

The best way to get ever the ills of life, is to face them square up-not with stoical indifference or in a dare devil, care nothing kind of a way, but with a steady nerve and true manly courage. Even the best friends are not always counsellers in times of misfortune, and their advice is generally as varied as the ills that afflict us. Human flesh is exceedingly frail and the best judgements liable to err as the experience and history of the race will prove.

Because a man makes one false step in his lifetime, it is bardly sufficient, reason for abject despondency-neither does it follow that their successive steps will be false. Painful experience imparts some very solitary lessons, and is an instructor we cannot safely disregard. Job's comforters are plentiful when our sky is overskadowed, but true friends are as scarce as hen's teeth. Public opinion, whether right or wrong, is all potent, and those upon whom we most confidently rely in our misfortunes, especially when self imposed, are generally the first to fly, and alas I too often prove the bitterest in their indulgence of vindictive ani mos-

> "The friends who in our sunshine live, When winter comes are flown, And he who has but tears to give Must weep those tears alone."

How sadly is the world wanting in that divinest Christian graces—charity. If poeple, and even professors of religion, were as assiduous in trying to reclaim the fallen, as they are to keep them down when once down-Their efforts would be exerted in a much more praiseworthy direction --True religion has no kick for the erring, but knowing the frailty of flesh abounds with pity .- Col.

Dow Discovering a Tener .- After Lorenzo Dow had retired to his room, after a hard day's travel in the western part of Virginia, a number of persons collected in the bar-room to enjoy their usual revelries; as was the custom in that part of the country. At a late hour in the night, the alarm was given that one of the company had lost his pocket book, and a search ensued. Whereupon the landlord remarked that Lorenzo Dow was in the house, and that if the money was there, he knew that Lorenzo could find it. The suggestion was instantly receeived with approbation, and accordingly Mr. Dow was aroused from his slumbers, and brought forth to find the money. As he entered the room; his eyes ran through the company with searching inquiry, but nothing appeared that could fix guilt upon any one. The loser appeared with a countenance expressive of great' concern, and besought Dow, for heaven's sake, to find the money.

"Have any left of the company since you lost your money?" said Mr. Dow.

"None," said the loser, "none." "Then," said Lorenzo, turning to the landlord,

"go and bring me a large dinner pot." This created no little surprise. But, as supernatural powers were universally conceded, his doctrines were unhesitatingly obeyed. Accordingly the pot was brought forward, and set in the mildle of the room.

"Now," said Lorenzo, "go and bring the old chicken cock from the roost."

This was also done; and at Lorenzo's directions, the coek was placed in the pot and covered over with a board or lid. "Let the door now be fastened, and the lights extinguished," said Mr. Dow; which was also done.

"Now," said he, "every person in the room must rub his hand hard against the pot, when the guilty hand touches, the cock will crow.,, Accordingly, all came forward and rubbed, or pretended to rub against the pot. But no cock crowed. "Let the candles now be lighted," said Lorenzo; | uary, 1865.

"there is no guilty person here; if the man had any money, he must have lost it some place else. But stop," said Lorenzo, when all things were prepared, let us now examine the hands." This was the important part of his arrangement, far, on examination, it was found that one man had not rubbed the pot. The others' hands being black with the soot from the pot, was a proof of their "There," said Lorenzo, pointing to the man with clean hands, "there is the man who picked your pocket. The culprit, seeing his detection, at once acknowleged his guilt, and gave up the money.

WELLINGTON AT WATERLOO.

About 4 o'clock, P. M., the enemy's artillery in front of us ceased firing all of a sudden, and we saw large masses of cavalry advance; not a man present who survived could have forgetten in after life the awful grandeur of that charge. You discovered at a distance what appeared to be an overwhelming, long moving line which, ever advancing, glittered like a stormy wave of the sea when it catches the PROPRIETORS OF THE MAGNOLIA, sunlight. On they came until they got near enough, whilst the very earth seemed to vibrate beneath the thundering tramp of the mounted host. One might suppose that nothing could have resisted the sheck of this terrible moving mass. They were the famous cuirsssiers, almost all old soldiers, who had distinguished themselves on most of the battlefields of Europe, and were shouting "Vive l'Empereur !" The word of command, "Prepare to receive cavalry," had been given, every man in the front ranks knelt, and a wall, bristling with steel, held together by steady hands, presented itself to the infuriated cuirassiers.

Just before this charge the Duke entered by one of the angles of the square, accompanied only by one aid-de-camp, all the rest of his staff being either killed or wounded. Our commander-in-chief, as as good scholars. Address far al could judge, appeared perfectly composed, but looked very thoughtful and pale. He was dressed in a great coat with a cape, white cravat, leather pantaloons, Hessian boots, and a large cocked hat a la Russe. The charge of the French cavalry was gallantly executed, but our well directed fire brought men and horses down, and ere long the utmest confision arose in their ranks. The officers were exceedingly brave, and by their gestures and fearless bearing did all in their power to encourage their men to form again and renew the attack. The Duke sat unmoved, mounted on his favorite charger. I recollect his asking the Hen. Colone! Stanthope what e'clock it was, upon which Stanhope took out his watch and said it was wenty minutes past four. The Duke replied, The battle is mine; and if the Pruesians arrive on, there will be an end of the war."- Remininess of Capt. Gronow.

THE OLD OAKEN BUCKET.

How dear to this heart are the scenes of my childs hood. When fond recollection presents them to view!

The bridge, and the rock where the cataract fell; The cot of my father, the dairy-house nigh it, And e'en the rude bucket which hung in the well. The old oaken bucket, the iron-bound bucket, The moss cover'd backet which hung in the well.

That moss cover'd vessel I hail as a treasure, For often at noon, when return'd from the field, found it the source of an exquisite pleasure. The purest and sweetest that nature can yield. How ardent I seized it with hands that were glow-

With the liberty transmitted by sheir forefathers, they have inherited the spirit to defend it. The choice between war and abject submission is before them. To such a proposal, brave men with arms in their hands, can have but one answer.

They cannot barter manhood for leace, nor the right of self-government for life or property. But justice to them requires a serner admonition to those who have abandoned their comrades in the hour of peril.

A last opportunity is offered then to wipe out the disgrace, and escape the punishment of their crimes. By authority of the President of the Con. federate States, a pardon is announted to such deserters and men improperly absent, as shall return to the commands to which they belong, within the shortest possible time, not exceeding twenty days from publication of this order, at the Headquarters of the Department in which they may be.

Our resources, wisely and vigorhusly employed, are ample, and with a brave army sustained by a determined and united people, success, with God's assistance, cannot be doubtful.

The advantages of the enemy will have but little value if we do not permit them to impair our resov lution. New Daily Paper in Richmond. PROSPECTUS the title of "THE RICHMOND LERALD," on or about the 15th of January next.

It will be entirely independent in politics, but will never-theless accord to the administration a just support in all mea premotive of the good of the cause it which we are engaged.

A proper criticism of such acts as well be deemed adverse to this object, will be, of course, conjuctent with the independent character under which the paper is to be inaugurated.

In the matter of General News it will be found to keep pec with the leading journals of the cay, while it will have added to it in the way of financial intelligence a feature such as, we venture to say, no paper in the Cenfederacy can beast of. Editorials from the pen of the ablest financial writers in this or any other could y will be presented in cial writers in this or any other coursely will be presented in each number.

For reasons not now proper to be mentioned, we forbear to give the names of those who shall compose the regular editorial staff; but we flatter ourselves that when they shall appear they will be found to constitute such an array of talent as cannotibe excelled on this continut.

The well known character of the ilidividual whose name appears below, as a stenographic reporter, furnishes, we presume, a guarantee that, in all that relates to important political speeches and debates, whether is legislative assemblies or out of them, the "HERALD" will present advantages certainly not to be excelled by any paper in the Confederacy.

The farming interests will be faithfully vindicated, and care taken to disseminate the earliest intelligence which a proper regard for the welfare of that great elament of national wealth and power shall demand.

In the matter of correct commercial intelligence, equal zeal shall be manifested, our object being to assign to each of these departments an editor of known expedience and ability.

departments an editor of known experience and ability.

Arrangements are on foot by which to seeme the earliest fereign news, and the paper will contain such editorial talent as will fully elacidate the bearing of foreign diplomacy upon Southern interests.

In short, "THE RICHMOND H SHALD" will be found to ombine every feature of interest which the requirements of the present crisis demand.

The enterprise is repectfully continended to the favor and patronage of the citizens of the Softhern Confederacy.
