PEACE PROPOSITIONS.

Inasmuch as a proposition has been made in the Lincoln Congress to appoint, three Commissioners to visit Richmond and arrange terms of peace on the basis of a re-pnion, and although that proposition was voted down by a large majority, we think the Confederate Congress might now, wish propriety, app int Commissioners to go to Washington and arrange terms of peace on the basis of separation and the fudependence of the Confederacy. We have no hope that such propositions would be entertained, at this time, by the Lincoln government, but it would do mo-harm to make the trial, as it is well known to every intelligent man that our government is anxions and ready at any time to make peace on such

The proposition ought to be made, if for no other reason, in order to satisfy that portion of our people who seem to thank that all that is necessary to sethre peace is for our authorities to make some sort of proposals to the Lincoin government. If the commissioners are appointed, and Lincoln refuses to receive them, why all our people will theu see what that the Committee had, already nearly pratured a bill of | they have to depend on, and all who are not traitors at heart to their country will co-sperate in sustaining our cause and producing concord and unity among

The proposition ought to be made for another reason: in order to throw the responsibility of rejecting on the Lincoln government. The people at the North might be enabled to see the matter in a new | light, and a revolution in public sentiment effected which might overthrow the Lincoln dynasty and place men in power who would be disposed to commence regoriations for peace.

A proposition of this sort ought to come from our national authorities and not from a State Legislature or a State Convention. Separate State action on this subject would produce discord and fail to effect any good, however patriotic the object of the movers might be. Besides, Congress is the proper place where such propositions should emanate.

We do not make these suggestions at the instiga-The Christmas of 1863 will long be remembered | tion of any man in or out of office, but we make them by those who passed the day in the city of Charleston. | because we presume it is a fact beyond doubt that For hours before the cast ru sky was streaked with lour authorities have always been willing to make the first grey thats of morning, the cold night air was | peace on terms which will acknowledge the indepencence of the Confederate States. There had been no further up to a late hour ! ful to every free-born Southern man. (Besides this, no one has given the Confederate authorities a more cordial support than we have) And we cannot see that there is any conflict between these sentiments and a proposition to appoint commissioners to arrange for peace on the basis of separation and independence.
