A Teacher

Wanted in the Hyco Academy.

MR. John H. Hinton, the present Teacher of the Academy having made known to the Trustees his intention of withdrawing from the institution at the close of the present year, the Board wish to employ as a successor, a well qualified teacher, to enter upon the duties of Principal, at the beginning of the ensuing year. Under Mr. Hinton's care, the Academy has been rendered strictly preparatory to the University; the Board having ratified his adoption of the course of studies requisite for entering the three lower classes at the College. In the employment of a Teacher, therefore, it is their object to get one qualified to instruct according to this system.

For the purposes of facilitating the procurement of a teacher, whenever one may be wanted in the Academy, and of rendering this situation comfortable and desirable, the Trustees have, at considerable expense and trouble, erected suitable buildings upon a lot of three or four acres of ground, within less than a quarter of a mile of the Academy, and very contiguous to a fine water as any in the upper country. The use of these buildings and the lot, together with a great abundance of fire-wood on the spot, are now, and will be allowed to the teacher free from expense.

To a person who can come well recommended for correctness of Scholarship and morality of character, it is believed that few situations of the kind in the state, can be more inviting.

The School has almost uniformly been large and flourishing, so as to bring in a handsome income to the teacher; and it is expected that it will continue to be so.

A Georgian or at least, a pious man, with a family, would be preferred.

By Order of the Board,
GEORGE W. JEFFREYS, Sec'y.

Miscellaneous.

The opinions and sentiments of the EDINBURGH REVIEW, on the present state of Europe, and the probable extension of political Revolution.
We have been much interested in the perusal of an article in the last Edinburgh Review, on the "Dispositions of England and America"—and were particularly gratified with the opinions and sentiments of that celebrated journal on the situation and prospects of the Old World, as contained in the following extract: "It is impossible to look to the state of the Old World without seeing, or rather feeling, that there is a greater and more momentous contest impending, than ever before agitated human society. In Germany—in Spain—in France—in Italy, the principles of Reform and Liberty are visibly arraying themselves for a final struggle with the principles of Established abuse,—Legitimacy, or Tyranny,—or Whatever else it is called, by its friends or enemies. Even in England, the more modified elements of the same principles are stirring and heaving, around, above and beneath us, with unprecedented agitation and terror; and every thing betokens an approaching crisis in the great European commonwealth, by the result of which the future character of its governments, and the structure and condition of its society, will in all probability be determined. The ultimate result, or the course of events that are to lead to it, we have not the presumption to predict. The struggle may be long or transitory—anguishful or bloodless; and it may end in a great and signal amelioration of all existing institutions, or in the establishment of one vast federation of military despots, domineering as usual in the midst of sensuality, barbarism, and gloom. The issues of all these things are in the hand of Providence and the womb of time; and no human eye can yet foresee the fashion of their accomplishment. But great changes are evidently preparing; and in 30 years—most probably in a far shorter time—some material alterations must have taken place in most of the established governments of Europe, and the rights of the European nations been established on a surer and more durable basis. Half a century cannot pass away in growing discords on the part of the people, and growing fears and precautions on that of their rulers. Their pretensions must at last be put into issue; and abide the settlement of force, or fear, or reason."
"Looking back to what has already happened in the world, both recently and in ancient times, we can scarcely doubt that the cause of liberty will be ultimately triumphant. But through what trials and sufferings—what martyrdoms and persecutions it is doomed to work out its triumph—we profess ourselves totally unable to conjecture. The union of the lower and the higher classes, which was gradually disappearing with the increasing intelligence of the former, but has lately been renewed by circumstances which we cannot now stop to examine, leads us much to confess, to gloomy auguries as to the character of this contest; and fills us with apprehensions, that it may neither be peaceful nor brief. But in this, and in every other respect, we conceive that much will depend on the part that is taken by America, and on the dispositions which she may have cultivated towards the different parties concerned. Her great and growing wealth and population—her universal commercial relations—her own impregnable security—and her remoteness from the scene of dissension—must give her prodigious power and influence in such a crisis, either as a mediator or umpire, or, if she take a part, as an auxiliary and ally. That she must wish well to the cause of Freedom, it would be indecent to doubt—and that she should take an active part against it, is a thing not even to be imagined:—But she may stand aloof, a cold and disinterested spectator; and, counterfeiting a prudent indifference to scenes that neither can nor ought to be indifferent to her, may see, unmoved, the prolongation of a lamentable contest, which her interference might either have prevented, or brought to a speedy termination. And this course she will most probably follow, if she allows herself to conceive antipathies to nations for the faults of a few calumnious individuals: And especially if upon grounds so trivial she should nourish such an animosity towards England, as to feel a repugnance to make common cause with her even in behalf of their common inheritance of freedom."
"Assuredly, there is yet no other country in Europe where the principles of liberty, and the rights and duties of nations, are so well understood as with us—or in which so great a number of men, qualified to write, speak, and act with authority, are at all times ready to take a reasonable, liberal, and practical view of those principles and duties. The Government, indeed, has not always been either wise or generous, to its own or other countries;—but it has partaken, or at least has been controlled by the general spirit of freedom; and we have no hesitation in saying, that the Free Constitution of England has been a blessing and protection to the remotest nations of Europe for the last 100 years. Had England not been free, the worst despotism in Europe must have been far worse than it is, at this moment. If the world had been parcelled out among arbitrary monarchs, and encouraged each other in all sorts of abuses. But the existence of one powerful and flourishing state, where juster maxims were admitted, has shamed them out of their worst enormities, given countenance and encouragement to the claims of their oppressed subjects, and gradually taught their rulers to understand, that a certain measure of liberty was not only compatible with national greatness and splendour; but essential to its support. In the days of Queen Elizabeth, England was the champion and asylum of Religious freedom—in those of King William, of National Independence. If a less generous spirit has prevailed in her Cabinet since the settled predominance of Tory principles in her councils, still, the effects of her Parliamentary Opposition—the artillery of her Free Press—the voice, in short, of her People, have not been without their effects;—and, though some flagrant acts of injustice have stained her recent annals, we still venture to hope, that the dread of the British Public is felt as far as Petersburg and Vienna; and would fain indulge ourselves with the belief, that it may yet scare some Imperial spoiler from a part of his prey and lighten, if not break, the chains of many distant captives.
"It is in aid of this decaying, perhaps expir-
