While England and Ireland have ground under the yoke of poverty and oppressions while France has been drained of her richest tressuren, and pouted out her dearest blood on the alter of ambition, while Germany, harassed by divisions and contentions, has been compelled to impose her gag-laws to prevent the free disculation of knowledge, while the proud Autocrat of Russia has not dare it to venture himself amongst his own subjects, for fear that vengeance might overtake his acts of oppression, the American people have continued to reap the benefits of a government, at whose head has stood for twenty-four years, a President, placed there by the recommendation of a Caucous monituation.

But pentlemen have called those meetings

the recommendation of a Caucus nomination.
But gentlemen have called those meetings conspiracies. Is this asked Mr. B. the fact! If he understood any thing of the nature of these meetings, they consisted of a number of members of Caucus and State of a number of members of Caucus and State of a number of members of Caucus and State of a number of members of Caucus and State of St members of Congress, who meet together, in order to express their opinions on the fittest man in the union, to be trusted to preside over the nation as supreme magistrate. And who, he asked, could better determine this question, than a set of men chosen by the people themselves, for their virtues, their talents, and their patriotism, many of whom probably are acquainted with all the different candidates for that office? It is impossible that the mass of the peolple, in every quar-ter of the union, can be personally acquaint-ed with the candidates, and they are there-fore dependent on those who are, for proper information on that subject. And who are better qualified to inform them than their immediate Representatives he thought none, though gentlemen had held up these meetings as a "reme-head and bloody-bones," to alarm the people, and to enlist on their side the prejudices of the vulgar.

The most violent opposers of these meet-exhibited against me by the slovessid committee, ings themselves, hold similar ones annual. ly, for the purpose of nominating their Mem-bers of Assembly and Members of Congress. Mr. B. alluded to the Tammany Society of New-York, where the first alarm respecting Caucuses was made; and he had been informof those which lie on our table, was himself the year of 1822, to wit: once the warmest advocate for the Caucus 1452 acres, on Black creek system; but as the processor of the Caucus 1452 acres, on Black creek system; but as the proposed Caucus will not, it is believe promote his views in renow violently opposed to it.

To abandon a system at this time, which has been uniformly acted upon with success, by the Republicans of the Union, would be yielding up the sword of victory into the hands of our political enemies—it would be clipping off the locks from the head of our political Sampson, and drawing on our shoul-ders, hordes of conquering Philistines.

and Representatives in Congress? Has our so, I would be glad that gentlemen would wishing to pur point it out. If indeed we have a right to in-invited to call. struct our Representatives in Congress, they have the same right to instruct us, for we derive our authority from the same source, and N. B. Carriages of every description repaired are both amenable to the people for our con- at the shortest notice, and on the most reasonaduct. But how would such instructions be ble terms. received by this house? Would they not be treated with that contempt which they would most richly merit? They certainly would. What benefit do gentlemen expect to derive from defeating the good old course of a recommendation by a majority of our friends at Washington? He had yet heard of no advantage to be derived from such an Wednesday, the 30th of June, and close on the event. The result would certainly be, 2d of July. Gold Medals will be presented to people. We know that there are five can- studies. didates for the Presidential Chair, and no gentleman on this floor can say, if they be all voted for, that any one of them has any thance of being elected. And if there be no election by the people, the election of large and Dancing, if taught, are charged extra.

Oxford, June 6, 1824 must, of course, go into the House of Repre-sentatives. He had been taught, that Aristocraoics were the worst of all governments. Here we should see the few govern the many, contrary to every Republican maxim of government. The thirteen small States, containing a population less than three millions, would have it in their power to give the United States a President, contrary to the wishes of eleven of the largest States, con-taining more than seven millions and a half of inhabitants. Would this be a result consistent with Republican Government? Surely it would not, and a President thus elected, might have views directly opposed to those of a majority of both Houses of Congress; which would be pregnant with the greatest dissatisfaction to a large majority of the Nation, and evils might emanate from it which our latest posterity might rue. But, sir, said Mr. B. I do trust, that this country will be preserved from such a state of things, by boiding fast to the good old course hitherto pursued. I do trust, that the Republicans of the present day, will not prove themselves the unworthy offspring of their honored and venerated progenitors, whose blood and treasure have purchased those liberties, of which we now so proudly boast. I do hope, said be, that the fire of '76, is not yet entirely extinguished in the breasts of my countrymen. Mr. 1. had no doubt that incendiary agents were now travelling to and fro, throughout this country, preaching up discord and divi-sion, in order to divide the strength of the unsuspecting Republicans of the Union, in relation to the pending Presidential election. Let us, said he, look around us, and see if there be Juduses amongst us, by whom we may be betrayed into the hands of our ene-

It has been asserted by an honorable gentleman on this floor, that those who composed the Caucuses at Washington, were a combination of intriguers and traitors. If so, they have been of a very friendly character to this Union; for they have given us a Jefferson, a Madison, and a Monroe, than whom, Athens nor Sparta, Rome nor Carthage, have never boasted of profounder politicians, or more accomplished statesmen. While Caucuses contime to produce such blessings to the Nation, he implored gentlemen to leave it unhurt, as an ancient oak of the forest, whose fostering branches have afforded us a shelter and branches have afforded us a shelter and a shade from the scorching rays of party animosities. But before I conclude, added Mr. B. let me remind gentlemen of the following trite, but correct maxim, which is applicable to this, as well as to other occasions: "anited me shad stand, but divided we must fall."

Interng anited several rooms to his dwelling bouse, he will be able to accommodate from forty of fifty boarders with convenience.

Price of board, one dollar per day, six dollars to this, as well as to other occasions: "anited me shad stand, but divided we must fall."

S hereby given to the public generally, that the Stage line from Rakeigh to Newbern will be continued. I was under the impression, for some time past, that I should be compelled to abandon running my Stage on that rout, in consequence of my pay being too inconsiderable to de, tray the expenses of this establishment; but nowing that it was a desirable thing to the public generally, that the Stage should continue to run on this route, I have lately petitioned, together with many respectable gentlemen, to the Post Master General to give me some additional compensation for conveying the Mail in a Stage, and thereby enable me to continue running a Stage for the accommodation of travellers; and through the means of my respectful friends, the department have agreed to add some additional compensation to that of my former contract; therefore, I shall continue to run a Stage punctually without doubt. This stage rout intersects with the Fayetteville and Noriotk line of Stages at Waynesborough, and I have lately added another teem of horses, to the rout; and my Stage being in good repair, I pledge myself that nothing shall be wanting on my part to render those com-fortable who may think proper to travel with me.

I have a good and careful driver, and good horses on the line. The Stage will leave Raleigh and Newbern as heretolore. (Say, leave Raleigh e-very Friday at six P.
