THE MUSEUM

Foreign Literature and Science,

Published by E. LITTELL, Philadelphia.

It is composed entirely, as its title implies, of selections from foreign Journals. A few words may show that it is however far from being adverse to our own institutions or literature—and that on the contrary, it may have an important effect in preventing the dissemination of doctrines in discordance with the principles upon which our society is constituted.

Some of the British Reviews and Magazines are reprinted in this country exactly as they appear at home, and they, as well as those which are not published here, embrace much matter of little interest and no advantage to our readers—and which is not unfrequently fitted to vitiate their literary taste, their morals, or their political principles.

But while it cannot be denied that there is in all these foreign Journals a large part which consists of details and speculations which are uninteresting to American readers, or mischievous in their political or moral tendency, it is equally certain that a considerable portion of their contents is of general application and of interest and value, and that they embrace much that is in a very high degree interesting and curious—practical, sound and able—refined and elegant; much that will excite thought and refine the imagination—that will raise the genius and mend the heart.

And when we consider that the greatest philosophers and statesmen, as well as poets, critics, and all other men of literature, now find the periodical press the channel through which their opinions can be conveyed with the greatest certainty and effect to the greatest number of men, it will appear very evident, that a knowledge of what is thus written and done abroad is necessary to the successful cultivation of our own literature, and important to the politician, scholar and man of business, as well as to him who reads only for amusement.

The persons who reside at a distance from the great depositories of New Books & New Inventions, a work conducted upon this plan is peculiarly important, as affording to them an opportunity of keeping pace, in some degree, with the progress of knowledge, at a very trifling expense of money or time.

When it is added, that most of the literature of the day is not easily accessible in any other than this form to our families, it will readily be acknowledged that a work conducted upon the plan of the MUSEUM may be in a very considerable degree interesting and valuable. How far this Journal has been successful in endeavoring to merit these appellations, must be determined by the public; & the rapid increase of the subscription list is the most gratifying proof of success.

TERMS OF PUBLICATION. The MUSEUM is published by E. LITTELL, Philadelphia. A number appears every month, and the subscription price is six Dollars a year, payable in advance.

It will be sent free of postage to every subscriber, as long as he continues to pay in advance. The Museum began in July, 1823, and all the back numbers may be obtained on the above conditions.

Notice

To the Officers and Soldiers of the Revolutionary War, in the North-Carolina line, and to the heirs of such, who have not as yet obtained the portion of Lands due to them for such military services.

As convenience to such claimants many of whom are of advanced age, is in a measure unable to travel to Raleigh, together with the wishes and opinions of several influential and well informed men, suggests the utility of the establishment of an office in this city, where for a moderate fee, such claims can be received and put in train for legal investigation, so as to have them promptly decided on.

The subscriber living in Raleigh, offers his professional services as an Attorney, to all persons so situated, and promises to attend to, and put all claims transmitted to him, supported by affidavits, in train for adjudication by the Commissioners to whom the subject has been referred by the last General Assembly of North-Carolina, and whose decision upon all claims submitted to them agreeably to law, will be final, according to the provisions of the above cited act of the last session, constituting them a Board for that purpose.

As the act above cited of the last session constituting the said Board, for the adjudication of all such claims, will expire on the first of July next, and the subject be at rest for ever after, persons wishing to avail themselves of the subscriber's offer, and professional services, will apply as soon as possible, so as to give time to have their several claims maturely considered, and deliberately adjudicated.

He further informs those interested in such claims, that he has made such arrangements with gentlemen of intelligence and integrity, as will enable him to have any Lands they shall obtain, located, or otherwise disposed of to the best advantage for a proportion of either the Lands or proceeds.

The subscriber will expect every application to him on the subject accompanied by a moderate fee, and delivered at his office in Raleigh, free of expense to him.

JOHN D. DELACY. Raleigh, Jan. 29th, 1825. 10-4f

Every applicant must state the Company and regiment he enlisted and served in, the name of the Captain and Colonel, the length of time he served, and where, and the affidavits of some persons who served with them, and personally knew them to have served. The heirs must prove the services in the same way of the deceased.

Shocking Dispositions of Providence.

A few days since, a man, by the name of Baker, made his escape from the Retreat in Hartford, and came into Farmington, to the house of Ira Rowe a distant relation of his.

He wandered about from house to house in the western part of the town, asking for food and drink, until Sabbath evening the 15th inst. He then entered the dwelling of Elias Goodrich, and began to use violence, being a remarkably strong and active man. Mr. G. fled with his wife and children to a neighboring house, and persuaded Mr. Noadiah Bird to return with him to his house, and disposes of securing the maniac. Mr. Bird, on entering the house, holding a candle in his hand, received a blow on the head from the door with an axe, which fractured his skull; and in all probability occasioned instant death. Mr. Goodrich again fled, and after collecting one or two more of his neighbors, returned, and found Mr. Bird lying with his head on the door-sill, almost discovered from the body. The murderer had fled; but the axe was found under a window covered with hair and blood!

On Monday, hundreds of men went in pursuit of the murderer without success. On the following night, several men were appointed to guard two houses, to one or the other of which it was expected he would return. These men, as many others, on the preceding day had done, very imprudently and unnecessarily, armed themselves with guns. Having been warned against the use of such weapons, a countersign was agreed upon between them, lest they might injure each other. The night was dark and rainy, and about three o'clock the guard at one of the houses went to visit the other—coming near, they were discovered or heard by the other guard, who set a large dog upon them. The approaching men, three in number, immediately gave the countersign; but the barking of the dog, it is supposed, prevented its being heard; and one of the guard named Gager, being greatly frightened, though standing with two others by his side, discharged his gun towards his approaching companions, and shot one of them, Drayton Bodwell, his intimate friend, nearly through the heart. Bodwell was 21 years of age—a member of the church in that town, and who expected shortly to have married a young lady in his neighborhood. Mr. Bodwell lived only to say that he freely forgave the man who shot him.

The bodies were both taken to the meeting house on Wednesday, where a sermon was delivered by Rev. Noah Porter to a vast assembly of people, who deeply sympathized with those relatives and neighbors, who were thus, in this extraordinary and lamentable manner, separated forever from their friends.

The maniac was an inhabitant of Bristol, (Conn.) stout built, very athletic, and wore at the time only a shirt, vest, and plaid cloak. He was taken and secured on Wednesday last in the western part of Hartford.—Register.

Melancholy Occurrence.

Mr. Dennis Kindrick, aged about 24 years, a respectable man, married to an amiable woman, father of two or three fine children, and possessed of a decent competency, put a period to his existence on Thursday last, at his own residence, in Mecklenburg county, Va. about 20 miles from this place.

He had commenced house keeping, was careful and industrious, and until lately remarkable for his general cheerfulness and fine flow of spirits. He had, in order to increase his store, hired labourers and rented lands, thus making engagements, which there is not a doubt he would have easily complied with and would have been beneficial—when the late rainy and tempestuous weather set in, and in a fit of gloomy despondency, for fear he should get behind hand, he made a fruitless attempt to destroy himself, in which he was arrested by the providential arrival of his wife. He confessed what he was about to do, owned the cause of it, and promised not to make such another attempt. He the next day requested his wife to have an early dinner, as he wished to go and see a friend—took his bridle in his hand, to go for his horse that was at pasture—went to a tree, which he climbed; fastened one end of the bridle to the tree and the other around his neck—sprung off—broke his neck, and launched himself into eternity.
