There's no such joy as aculaing. The instant that I one my eyes,
Adicu all they to allenee;
Before my neighbors can arise,
They hene my tongue a mile hene
Vinen at the board I take my seat,
"I is one continual riou;
I cut and needs, and scale and cut,
My clack 'the never quiet."

Too fit, too lean, too hot, too cold,
I ever am complaining;
Too raw, too roast, too young, too old,
Each guest at table paining;
but it he food, on least, or fish;
Though of my own providing,
still fast findt with every dith;
Still every servant chiding.

But when to bed I go at night,
I supery fall a weeping.
For then I loss my great delight.

It gives wings of our instances encroached upon our religions and Lehtning to pleasure, but feet of lead to evenced to us, the necessity of a general representation of the Local Preschers and Lay-members enjayment a spor. It robs beauty of her charms to bestow them on her picture, and builds a monument to merit. but denies it a house; it is the transient and decembed flatterer of falsehood, but the tried and final friend of truth. Time is the most subtle, yet the most h satiable of depredators, and by ap-pearing to take nothing, is permitted to take all; nor can it be satisfied until it has stolen the w rid from us, and us from the world. It constantly flies, yet overcomes all things by flight, and although it is the present ally, it will be the future conqueror of Death. Time, the cradle of hope, but the grave of ambition, is the stern corrector of fools, but the salutary counsellor of the wise, bringing all they dread to the one, and all they desire to the other; but like Cassandra, it warms us with a voice that even the sages discredit too long, and the silliest believe too late.—Wis dum walks before opportunity with it; and repentance behind it; he that has made at his friend, will have little to fear from his enemies; but he that has made at his enemy, will have but little to hope from his friends. —Lacon.

TIME.

Time is the most indefinable, yet paradoxical of things; the past is gone, the future is not come, and the present becomes the past even white we attempt to define it, and like the flash of lightning at once exists and expires.

Lime is the measurer of all things, but the state of the present becomes the manufacture of the present though the fact was then unknown to us. The undersigned are uncertain whether the notes were given rather than the of another man, and had been previously patented as such though the fact was then unknown to us. The undersigned are uncertain whether the notes were given to Jacob Hubbard, to Moses Mendenball, or to Jacob Hubbard as agent for Moses Mendenball.

To the people of the United States. Having seen an article in the Nashville Whig, purporting to be the production of Samuel Sper-ry, charging Thomas Key and myself with obtain-ing a patent for an improvement on a second soul illegally. I will just observe to the public: That Patent Office, he had to swear on the Holy Evan-gelist that he had invented a new and useful imrovement in the mode of letting water on water wheels, and prayed they would grant him a petent, which they did; and which on h is now filed in the office, and may be seen at any time. When I ap-plied it a patent for Thomas Key, the officer le-sally authorised compared the oaths of the said men, and discovered that Key's was the oldest, men, and discovered that key's was the cliest, and which was the just grounds on which key obtained his patent; and so soon as I can procure a true copy on eath, I will then show to the public who is entitled to the patent, Sperry or myself. You will notice in Mr. Sperry's last publication, where he says he invented his water shoot eight years ago, and swears entirely to the reserve. Any how, I will leave it to the public to say whether it looks reasonable or not hat a man would invent an improvement, and let t lie dead eight years; then renew it and awear he invented it from six to eight years afterwards and swear voluntary against his own interest, a every man knows the oldest invention will stand good, and as to Mr. Sperry, I do'nt mean to plague the public much more with him; but do again caution all persons from purchasing my improvement from Sperry or his agent, as they may rest assured the law will be enforced against all such. I would here inform the public that Sperry never was a mill wright; and never served a apprentice ship to any trade. I wish the public to examine for themselves into the date of this publication as I do'ne mean to plague myself any fication as I up he more about the said Sperry.
