The responsibility assigned me on the menorable day we have met to commemorate, involved the salvation of the country; and, of necessity, all the resources which could be embedded for its defence; an honest use was made of it, which it pleased the Most High to crown with assects. To Him, therefore, the great disposer of events, and to the brave Louisimians, Kentackians, Mississippians and Tennescians, let our thanks be returned for the happy termination of the crisis.

se this vast copyrism, your hospitable city, presents a pleasing contrain with the embarrasament and glown which attended its invasion by the enerty. It also attent the importance of Londina to the Union, and sanctions the reward which you have so liberally destowed upon the services of those gallant men, who, in the hour of danger, considered the safety of the State their ampreme rule of action.

Allow me to join you in the wish that the fruits of their bisour, and of your wisdom, may continue to secure the happiness and the liberty of Lorisina.

At the request of the Governor, and accompanied by him and his staff, the General then reviewed the troops. After which, attended by the Governor and Logislature, he proceeded to the Cashedral, where an impressive discourse, prepared by the Heverend Father Antonio de Sedilla, was delivered by a young Clerryman, the tength of which compels us to defer its publications with ardent gratitude. When I contemplate your long, useful, and happy life, approaching fourceory year, faithfully spent in the zervice of the most high, in this sanctuary, and smidst thin greatful people, it inspires me with increased reverence for the religions which you teach. To your plous labors in this community, do I stribute, in a great degree, dat deliverance from the invading foe, which crowned the valor of my compoles on the day of which this is the anniversary for a currel and religious life is a constant appeal to the layer of which this is the anniversary for a currel and religious life is a constant appeal to the layer of which this is the anniversary for a currel and religious life is a constant appeal to the layer of which this is the anniversary for a currel and religious life is a constant appeal to the layer of which this is the anniversary for a currel and religious life is a constant appeal to the layer of which this is the anniversary for a currel and religious life is a constant appeal to the layer of which they have been paleased to refer.

The Journal and Intelligencer, representing that Mr. Randolph would punish with death the introduction of an Irishman into Virginia, and the other, that he would thus punish the introduction of slaves from Africa. Mr. Randolph, in his place, on the 14th inst., called the attiention of the House to the misreport of his speech by the National Intelligencer, as appears from the report of that paper itself, on the 16th. Thus confirming the correctness of the report in the United States' Telegraph, in all its essential parts. The remarks of Mr. Randolph produced the following editorial comment in the National Intelligencer, of the 15th January, viz." [Here follow the comments of the Intelligencer, I will thus be seen that the editors of the Intelligencer admit that their report of Mr. Randolph remarks was incorrect, yet not withstanting the correction of Mr. Randolph, and the admission of the Intelligencer, the following communication not compared to the Mandolph, and the admission of the Intelligencer, the following communication not compared to the National Leavester the comments of the Mandolph, and the admission of the Intelligencer, the following communication necessaries.

Upon vending the letter is the New York American, the undersigned immediately fixed upon Mr. Sparkawk, as the writer, because he knew, from his own askin-wledgment to Mr. John S. Mechan, that the said Sparkawk was acting in the double capacity of Reporter for the National intelligencer, and "letter writer" for the National intelligencer, and "letter writer" for the New York American. He felt, as every honorable man, he trusts would feel, in his situation as the Editor of a public Journal of exa, we devoulation, the usefulness of which must mainly depend upon the character of the Editor, for versorty, which he has ever been anxious to maintain: Under this feoling he met Mr. Sparhawk, for the first time, in the room of the Committee of Claims, after the adjournment of the Scante, and under its impulse he twice inquired of Mr. Sparhawk, if he was the writer of the letter—and receiving equivorating answers, which loft no doubt that he would hold him responsible, and treat him accordingly. In wringing his none and pulting his ears, the undersigned had no intention to offer Mr. Sparhawk any other personal injury; his sole ebject being, not to hur, but to disgrace him. Instead of a bladgeon, as represented in the affidavit of the said Susanawk, he had his usual walking came in his hand, which he neither used nor intended to une—mor did he threaten to use it. The undersigned would also refer to Mr. Rind, an a winness of all the circumstances of this affair. Nothing was further from the intention of the undersigned, in imflicting merited disgrace, as he conseive, upon the said Sparhawk, than to intringe, in any degree, upon the dignity of the Seaste. It is fire possible that he can feel any other sentiment, towards your konorable hody, than the most profound respect; and if it should be conceived that the place was improper; it would be to him a antiject of deep regret, fore which an excuse, he trusts, will be found in the circumstances of the cana."
