Loyalty to the Confederate States is an acknowledged duty—paramount and indispensable.

Loyalty to the Confederate States is an acknowledged duty—paramount and indispensable. To inspire confidence and loyalty, it must be bold, strong, open, known, felt, diffusive.

Loyalty, like faith, and indeed most other terms, may, perhaps, be better defined by telling what it is not and what it does not do, than by telling what it is and what it does.

In defining loyalty to the Southern Confederacy, we must remember that out of the old United States government, two governments and two peoples have been formed.

Loyalty, then, is evidently not a desire to see the Northern and Southern governments consolidated, or the peoples inhabiting these regions reunited.

But there is an affected loyalty, which is the effect of cunning and restraint—that sort of loyalty which prompted Arnold to seek the command of West Point.

Such a sort of loyalty prates about two parties which existed in this State, in November, 1850—no party seeking to destroy, and the other seeking to preserve the old Union.

But we have no idea that, to any serious extent, will the farmers of the Southern Confederacy pursue a course hostile to their country.

Second-time has come and a propitious Providence will soon send us harvest. Knowing that as a man sows, so shall he also reap, let the farmer's seed-time be such as will cause himself and his country no regret, when the harvest appears.

Seven traitors were brought to Richmond, Saturday last, from Mathews county, Va.

The President has proclaimed martial law to extend over Greenbrier, Pocahontas, Bath, Alleghany, Monroe, Mercer, Raleigh, Fayette, Nicholas and Randolph counties, Virginia.

Gen. Gattlin. We agree with our cotemporary of the Wilmington Journal that "the tendency in human nature to go to extremes, is apt to do serious injustice."

to be mentioned to put our farmers on their guard.—On this subject, a late number of the Milledgeville (Ga.) Register says:

We are rejoiced to see evidence from all quarters of the South, that the planters are resolved to give all their lands and force to provisions, except a bare sufficiency to preserve cotton seed, and only enough for domestic use.

Facts and Rumors. PRINTERS IN THE ARMY.—One of the good jokes of the Mexican war was, that our victorious army having taken a Mexican town with a printing office in it, the general wanted to have general orders printed, but couldn't find Mexicans able to do it in English.
