July 19, 1862. Messes. Editors: SIRS-It is very seldom that we of the 14th ever see a Raleigh paper, and perhaps I may be in fault when I say the list of casualties in this regiment have never been published. I am not prepared to give the names of the killed and wounded, but am prepared to say she sustained a heavier loss, taking in comparison the numbers engaged, than any regiment on the field. We crossed over the Chickahominy at Mechanicsville under a heavy fire, were engaged in the charge at Cold Harbor, and charged the Yankees' stronghold at Malvern Hill, with only 175 men, (the other regiments ordered to charge having fallen back) and out of that gallant band only 45 were left. When ordered to fall back, we were in 50 yards of their batteries supported as they were by three Yankee brigades. Some perhaps will say it was a fooish charge, but I am proud to say the 14th never heard the word retreat before, and may it be the last time. RALEIGH.

The War-European intervention.

[From the New York Herald, 10th inst., editorial.] From the telegraphic news from Europe, which we published yesterday from Cape Race, it appears that Lord Palmerston disclaims any intention of interfering in our civil war at present. What he will say when the news of the recent disaster in Virginia reaches England is another question, and one whose solution will be looked forward to with great interest. That the purpose of the British aristocracy is to push forward France and to keep in the background themselves is evident. But Louis Napoleon will not meddle in our quarrel unless he can drag England along with him. She will, therefore, have to join him openly or make a secret treaty to follow him and give him . her support; for he will not commit himself to such a struggle alone. However this may be, there is only one safe course of action for the American government to follow, and that is to employ the interval between the present time and the full development of the intentions of Napoleon in making the most vigorons preparations to resist any European interference, Our true wisdom will be to act as if we were certain to be attacked by France and England, and our timely preparations will either prevent the meditated blow or render it powerless for evil when it falls. [From the local column of the Herald.]

On Tuesday evening next a meeting of foreigners will be held at the Cooper Institute to prepare an address to the French Emperor, urging him to abstain from intervention in our domestic quarrels.

The Paris correspondent of the semi-official Prushere that England is artfully endeavoring to involve France as deeply as possible into trans-atlantic affairs, while she keeps in the background herself .-The declaration of Lord Palmerston that, for the pretervention, and the simultaneous insinuations of the British journals that France had better undertrke the mediation on her own hook, afford a sufficient commentary to this policy. As in this case mediation could only signify the separation of the South from the North, the odium of such a proposal appears so foist the responsibility on the other.

It is to be regretted that the Federal commanders, carried away by an excitement and martial ardor easily accounted for, should have committed excesses-such as the military occupation of the Datch Consulate at New Orleans and the sequestration of the property found in it-which may be made the subject of diplomatic remonstrance

[From the Paris Corrrespondence of the N. Y. Herald.] The Constitutionnel of this morning contains an article, set up in the usual "double leaded" form of its articles which are intended to be considered as having a sort of semi-official character.

This last oracular assertion can only be explained by the fact, if it be one, and it is believed here, that Slidell has been authorized to promise the french Government that the Southern Confederacy will accept the plan of "mediation" which may be offered a proposition for the abolition of slavery by gradual means. If this be really so, the plan of mediation would meet with much more favor than it otherwise would among the people of Europe, who are so anxious that the war should be brought to an end.

[From the Berlin Correspondence of New York Herald.] The Berlin press is unanimous in its disapprobation of any attempt of France or England to interfere in the American difficulty. The Allgemeine Zeitung says that an offer of mediation proceeding from either of those powers would be sure to meet with a decided and mortifying repulse, and that President Lincoln would sooner enter into direct negotiation with Richmond than submit to foreign arbitrament.

THE QUESTION OF EMPLOYING THE SLAVES IN THE MILITARY SERVICE.-The scheme of arming and enrolling the blacks in the military service of the North is still pending in Congress. The Washington Malvern. correspondent of the New York Herald gives the following notice of the recent debates in the Senate on the subject

The bulk of to-day's session of the Senate was consumed in discussing the conduct of the war. No Senator speaks for the President and Cabinet and generals, though Mr. Fessenden said that there must be a change of conduct with all of these to satisfy the people and the army. The property of rebels must be no longer guarded. The employment of contrabands must be gone into extensively in the way of making entrenchments and in other camp service, and the news concerning unlitary matters must not be kept from the people.

Retreats most not be called strategic movements. Mr. Fessenden acknowledged that the prospects of volunteering was poor, and it was occasioned by the faults just mentioned. He enlarged upon the disease and death caused by the persisting toil of the soldiers in the swamps of the Chickahominy, throwing up entrenchments, but he did not say that there would have been no occasion for delays and labors if Gen. McClellan's plans had not been changed, and the corps of Gen. McDowell taken away from him.

An occasional detaching of a file of men to guard a house filled with women and children of rebels is much talked of in the Senate; but if the speakers themselves commanded the armies they might not be disposed to allow families to be disturbed by the disorderly hangers-on about camps. The White House in Virginia had but four rooms. In lower Virginia and Calvin Shores, G W Spicer, Lucines Witherspoon, in Tennessee houses are miles apart, and are not cou- A W Wilbar, J T Alexander, R Bracker, William venient for hospitals. Some central place, with buildings or tents concentrated there, is a necessity in campaigning, though comforts and conveniences are scarce indeed.

No vote was taken on the bill authorizing the employment of negroes upon entreachments, in camp service, and in other military duty. It is supposed that, under the last clause, the radical generals will put arms in the hands of the negroes, although such a thing was rather disclaimed by Messrs. Sherman and other Republican Secators. The bill appropriates ten million dollars to pay for the services of negroes who are to be thus employed, and it is proposed that their mothers and wives and children shall

If permanent entrenchments are to be built all along our border, and in all the leading places taken by our troops in the South, the labor of negroes may be used to advantage; but for moveable columns time will be required to get them together, organize and discipline them, in order that they may be as efficient with the axe and shovel as white men.

GOVERNOR: I deem it my duty as commanding officer of this regiment, to send you, if not a full report, at least a list of the killed and wounded of the regiment in the late battles before Richmond.

We participated in three pitch battles, to wit: Ellyson's Mills, Gains' Mill, and Malvern Hitl. Col. Stokes, although in very bad health, was in command at Ellyson's, and when ordered to charge the enemy's works behind the mill, led his regiment to the charge in a most gallant style. I was not with the regiment in this fight; my company was deployed as skirmishers and thrown forward to bring on the engagement. I went into the engagement with the battalion of skirmishers, under command of Lt. Col. DeRosset of the 3rd N. C.

141 All the Field officers of the regiment having been killed or wounded on the 26th of June, the command of the regiment devolved upon me. Before leaving the battle-field of Ellyson's Mill, two companies of the regiment, namely, D and F, were detailed to guard a bridge near Mechanicsville; the other companies marched to Gaines' Mill, but were so much cut up and exhausted by the previous day's engagement, that they were held in reserve until Gen. Hill's division was ordered to charge-we then moved forward, and from that time we were under a continuous fire from the enemy until the close of the action.

In this battle, both officers and men behaved with great gallantry and coolness. After this engagement there were not officers enough with the regiment to command it, the most of them being worn out from exhaustion, or incapable from sickness. 2 of the 8 companies had no commissioned officers with them; some of the others, only one. At this juneture, I requested that Lieut Col Bynum, of the second regiment N C Troops, be detailed to command the regiment, which was immediately done. I suppose he will report full particulars of the battle of Malvern Hill. I will, however, send you a list of the killed and wounded at

DIED,

At the Winder Hospital, Richmond, Va., of brain fever, on the 14th of July, Jacob M. Rogers, the first born son and child of James W. and Mary A. Rogers, aged 19 years ral 1 day. His disease was induced by the exhaustion of nismind and his body, which followed his return from the battlefield below Richmond in the Tuesday's fight. He was a private in Co. K. (Raleigh Rifles) 14th regiment N. C. T. Inspired by a sense of duty and a feeling of patriotic love for "his own native land," he entered the service of his country as a volunteer in the defence of the rights of the South in May, 1861, before he had attained his 18th year. His last hours, cheered by the presence of his father, were peaceful and apparently painless. His remains were brought to this city for interment. Jacob Rogers had the gentleness of an obedient and affectionate son and kind brother, united to the bravery and endurance of a good soldier. He met the dangers of the battle-field with calmness, and endured the hardships of camp life without murmuring. He was particularly noted for his cheerful, uncomplaining disposition, both as a son and as a soldier, and for the tender regard he always manifested for the happiness and wishes of his mother. He possessed an amiable disposition from his infancy, so that it may be said of him those who knew him most intimately loved him the most affectionately. It was a fit and delicate tribute of affection, when the hands of fair women decked his last resting place with beautiful flowers wreathed with unfading green "love's last gift" "to the carly dead."

NOTICE.

IN a former notice I stated that vegetables, fruits, clothing, &c., contributed for the sick and wounded in the hospitals in and around Richmond would receive prompt attention if sent to the Commissary and Quartermaster here and in Greensboro'. Since then it has occurred to me that many persons living below this point along the lines of our roads leading through Weldon would gladly send on things if they felt assured of their being received. To all such persons I would state that I have established a North Carolina Agency in Richmond to receive and distribute such contributions, and indeed, to receive and distribute anything intended for North Carolinians in the service about Richmond. Let everything intended for special distribution be so marked that t can be certainly known for whom it is intended, and it will be given out accordingly. Direct to Claiborne Watkins, E q., Agent North Carolina Depot, on Main Street, above Spotswood Hotel. CHAS. E. JOHNSON,

Surgeon General N. C. P. S .- In any instance where anything is intended for special distribution the person for whom it is intended should be written to on the subject. July 23.

Editors-Dear Sirs: We, the citizens and soldiers of Craven county, do hereby request of you to announce the name of our worthy triend, NATHAY WHITFORD, Esq., of Craven county, as a candidate for a seat in the Senate of the next General Assembly of North Carolina. Mr. Whitford is a citizen of Craven county, and was the second choice of the people two years ago. He is and ever has been a true Southern rights man, and has, during this war, remained at home, and has been not only assisting our army, but has done all that was necessary for our pickets—on account of which when the Yankees went to Swift Creek, they not only destroyed his property but carried off his negroes, and he had to flee his me to save his life. It would be useless to say anything in regard to Mr. Whittord's character and standing in Craven county, where he is known. Suffice it to say Mr. W is a worthy and honorable man, and one who, if elec tek, will discharge the duties imposed upon him with how or to himself, to his county and to the old North State.

Fitts, containing 640 acres, lying upon the waters of the Roanoke River, about four or five miles below St. Tammany, and some 20 miles above Gaston. The most of the Tract lies in Mecklenburg county, Virginia, bordering on Warren county, N. C., adjoining the lands of A. G. Boyd, Capt. Hunt, Dr. Wm.

. Howard and others, and is said to be by those who knew it best a very valuable tract of land. It produces well the crops usually grown in this country, Tobacco, Corn, Wheat and Oats, and I think is well located, being immediately on the waters of the Roanoke, by which all the produc raised on the farm for market might be delivered on the navigation line of boats and landed in market in less than 24 hours, a very great advantage when there is a rise in the market on wheat and tobacco; or, if desired, might be sent along one of the best country roads I ever saw seven miles to Warrenton Depot, on the Raleigh and Sarton Road, and from thence to Petersburg, Richmond, Nor folk or Wilmington, giving the planter a choice of markets after reaching Weldon, N. C. The improvements on this place are of a very plain, substantial order, consisting of a dwelling house with four rooms and a passage, stables. tobacco barns, and houses for 30 or 40 negroes. The tract has a plenty of wood and water, and cleared lands on it for 15 or 20 hands, and lies in the immediate neighborhood of Nathan Malone, F. A. Thornton, P. Hinton and A. G.

Boyd's saw and grist mills.

I should be pleased to sell the above lands immediately, to pay the debts of the estate, and having learned from the principal creditor of the estate that he is willing to take cotton in payment of his debt, I will here state that cotton will be received in payment for this valuable property.

Persons who may wish to purchase will address me at Henderson, N. Carolina. JOS.S S. J. ONE July 2, 1862.
