be Throws. Overbeard.--The plun-der at stake, &c. WASHINGTON, March 13, 1866. It is evident that the republican members, as distinguished from the radical faction in congress, are becoming more and more averse to a rupture with the President. They are disposed to strike out some new line of action whereby they will avoid collision with the President, retain the offices, and afford time for the consideration by the people of the pol-icy proposed by the President in regard to res-toration. Some of the members propose that congress shall close the session after admitting Tennessee and Arkansas, in deference to the President's wishes and opinions. They make this concession to him, and he, in turn, is not to use the power of Executive patronage against the republican party proper. This scheme leaves the radicals out in the cold. The Ex-centive axe will be free to fail upon them wherever they may be found in office. This plan involves a separation of the radi-cal tanatics from the Union republicans. The small democratic element of the 'president's wish arrangement, for it would destroy their hopes of an immediate rupture and collision. But there is a majority in both houses of members who may come in-to this arrangement, and it is not certain that the President will not approve of it, for he has positively assured a leading conservative sen-ator that he will not make any removals at present. Besides this, it is understood by some influential republican members of the house that the President is not disposed to enter upon any course of proscription. This is understood in Pennsylvania, where, as dem-ocratic politicians inform me, the democracy are heart and soul with Johnson in his fight is understood in Pennsylvania, where, as dem-ocratic politicians inform me, the democracy are heart and soul with Johnson in his fight against the radicals, and all they require is that the President should remove any office holders under him who fail to sustain him against the Stevens and Sumner revolutionists. Uniforms for fifteen thousand men and two thousand rifles of the very best pattern have been transported quict-ly during the last ten days, from New York city and from Troy to Burlington, Vermont, where they now remain concealed, awaiting the advance of the Fenian host. It is more ton St. Patrick's day, when there is to be a grand demonstration of some kind made by the Irish population in that locality. Arms in abun-dance are said to be stored at Detroit, Sandus-kay Buffalo, Ogdensburg, Plattsburg and Mont-peller. Three companies of Fenian volunteers have been organized in Burlington for service in Karice, has command of the battalion. The Vermont, Fenians have received trust-was a sceret meeting of the leaders of the movement in that city last Friday night, in a bundards are sub the twaster. ### A Thrilling Incident.

A contributor to the Atlanta Intelligencer concludes his "Reminiscences of the War, No.

Vol. VII. | No. 93. |

•) With the billowing includent of the battle of Gettysburg: When Gen, Longstreet advanced upon the Federal left, its first line was carried. But the enemy being heavily reinforced, rallied, and, in turn drove, our portion of the line (Ander-son's brigade) from the position, as well as other brigades on our right and left. Again we charged, and again were driven back. This was a critical moment for us, nearly all of our general officers were killed or wounded. Our heavy line had crumbled to a mere hand-full, and the flower of Longstreet's corps hay weltoring in blood. We were slowly retreat-ing, leaving many of our dead and wounded in the hands of the exulting foe. The hosts of the oneany came on like the mighty tides of the ocean, and the loud peals of victory were already rising from their haughty lips. The blue hills in their grare were brieting with bayonets, and pouring torrents of rein-forcements down their winding slope. Now, when we should have been reinforced with 30, 000 troops, Gen. Lee had not a man to send us. Officers broke their swords upon the rocks, and many of the men wept. Our dead and wounded comrades lay around us by thou-sands, and it seemed as if there was no hand and many of the infer kept. Orderad and wounded comrades law around us by thou-sands, and it seemed as if there was no hand to save the shattered remnant from destruc-tion. But aid did come—a man—a sol-itary man, threw himself before the juggernaut of Federal power, and alone and unaided, sought to stay its onward progress. I remem-ber, as if it were but yesterday, the zouave cap and iron grey beard of the stranger. None knew him, but all idolized him for his bravery. He moved through the awful storm with a steady step, and his uplifted sword seemed to say to the advancing foe, "thus far shalt thou come and nofurther." He said nothing, but his godlike example made a hero of every man who saw him. Sol-diers looked in the face of their comrades, and the question came simultancously to their blackened lips, "Who is he ?" echoed right and left, far up and down the line. The enemy came on like a tornado, and the proud hero stood enveloped in the snoke of their muskets, like a lion at bay. Men forgot to reload their pieces or conceal themselves behind the rocks, but stood stupefied with wonder. "Who is he?" men groaned—"who is he." officers repeat-ed, until the cry became strangely wild and fear-ful,—"General Lee" some one shouted, and the word rang along the line line a cleetric flash. "General Lee forever!" rang loud above the battle's roar, and as one man our gallant sol-diers rushed tike, a thunderbolt upon the as-tonished foe, "follow General Lee." cried our wounded comrades, as they lay upon the tram-pled earth and tossed up their bloody caps. No body of men on the broad green earth could have withstood the terrible impetuosity of this onset. The Federal troops, though they fought desperately, were compelled to give they fought desperately, were compelled to give back, and at last to retreat in confusion to the heights, leaving their dead and wounded in our hands. But where was the stranger? Alas! "The path of glory leads but to the grave." The war isover now, and the brave men whom we met that day as deadly enemies, we now meet as friends. We would not detract one ray from the crown of military glory that adorns each of their heroes, but would do justice to our la-mented dead; and if, by this imperfect sketch, I can add one flower to the chaplet of a fallen hero's fame, I shall feel myself amply reward-ed. And that hero ---who is he?" The ans-wer comes up from the graves of Gettysburg-Gen. Paul J. Semmes.

ESTABLISHMENT OF POST OFFICES .-- Last week the department promptly met all demands upon it for service performed by railroads or other modes of conveyance in the Southern States, whether for a fractional pe. riod or entire quarters. Applications for mail contracts have been received and service ordered in the Southern and Southwestern states daily. Within the past month there were re-opened the following post offices : In Virgin-ia, 98; West Virginia, 23; North Carolina, 88; Georgia, 41; Mississippi, 19; Tennessee, 19; Arkansas, 12; Texas, 27; South Carolina, 7; Ala-bama, 28: Louisiana, 6; Florida, 4.
