A Sorrel Mare stolen.

STOLEN from the subscriber, last Thursday night, the 23d instant, a MARE of the following description, viz. bright sorrel, a small blaze in her face, a high rump, one hind white foot, about fourteen hands in height, a thin mane, full blooded, and about four years old, had no brand when she was stolen, and has a very short head. It is supposed that she was carried away by a gang of horse thieves, that lately infested this neighbourhood; and a reward of six pounds is offered to any one who will secure her, and deliver her to Mr. William Meng, at Fayetteville, or to Richard West.

L. Dekeyser,

BEGS leave to inform the public, that he has taken Col. Porterfield's large, commodious new house, nearly opposite Mr. M. Aulsen's store, where he intends keeping a Boarding and House of Entertainment.—The house containing such a variety of pleasantly situated rooms, will enable him to accommodate a large number of the members of the ensuing assembly. His greatest efforts will be exerted to please those that favour him with their custom. He expects to be in the house by the first of October.
