TO THE LADIES

WHO ARE LOVERS OF LITERATURE.

A Society of literary character established at Philadelphia, intend publishing, (if sufficient encouragement is given) a selection of miscellaneous pieces, taken from the works of the most entertaining and instructive writers, that have appeared in the present century, whether in Europe or America; which publication, as it is designed chiefly for the amusement as well as instruction of the fair sex, they mean to designate by the name of "The Ladies Magazine, and repository of entertaining knowledge;" in which shall be exhibited, a greater variety of pleasing subjects, than has hitherto formed a book of its proposed extent in this or any other country. A general review of polite literature, is occasionally to compose a part of this work.—Essays, calculated to regulate the taste, form the judgment, and improve the mind, will constitute its chief ornament, and it is hoped recommend it to the notice of a judicious public. Sentiment, wit and honour shall go hand in hand to make this publication acceptable to its readers. The grave as well as the gay shall be suited in their turns. The Divine, the philosopher, and the naturalist shall each have a treat adapted to their different fancies and pursuits.

The plan of conduct, in the execution of this undertaking, having been submitted to the view of a few ladies in this city, well known for their literary knowledge, has met with their highest approbation, and the sex in general may rely on the editors utmost endeavours, to render it one of the most lively and instructive publications now in circulation.—Their correspondence is respectfully requested in either poetry or prose. The elegant productions of their pens, have hitherto adorned the most valuable Libraries, and it is expected, the Females of the United States are by no means deficient in those talents which have immortalized the names of a Montague, a Craven, a Moore, and a Seward, in their inimitable writings.

It has been observed, that monthly Magazines are so contracted, or contain so little on any one subject, that they leave the reader in suspense from one month to another, as the sequel or winding up of an interesting piece, which is a general complaint against them. It is proposed in order to avoid this inconvenience, to have the Ladies Magazine published every six months, in a handsome, large octavo volume, of at least three hundred pages, ornamented with an elegant frontispiece, and marble cover.

It is presumed, the above mode of publishing a work of this nature will be preferable to a monthly one, for the reasons beforementioned, as it shall never be strewed with that disgusting and wornout expression, "to be continued."

Persons of erudition and learning have suggested to us, that a book of this kind will be approved of, and universally recommended in all boarding-schools thro' the continent—as it is to contain every thing requisite to disseminate the knowledge of real life; portray virtue in the most amiable point of view—inspire the female mind with a love of religion, of patience, prudence and fortitude. In short, whatever tends to form the accomplished Woman, the complete economist, and that greatest of all treasures, a good wife.

One word more to our fair readers, and we have done: As this is the first attempt of the kind made in this country, we hope for their kind patronage, and the assistance of their muse. The greatest deference shall be paid to their literary communications, and unwearied exertions to please them, shall be best explained by the motto we have chosen, which is,

"The mind improve, and yet amuse."

Proposals by a Literary Society, established at Philadelphia, for printing by subscription.—The LADIES MAGAZINE AND REPOSITORY OF Entertaining Knowledge.

I. It is to be printed with a new Type, on fine paper, and ornamented with elegant Frontispiece, to contain at least 300 pages in large octavo, and to be published regularly every six months.

II. It shall contain Miscellaneous pieces from the most elegant authors, and extracts from the latest publications, both of Europe and America—Original Essays of correspondents—a Review of new Books—dissertations on Music, Painting, and Poetry—Oriental Tales, Remarkable events, Interesting anecdotes, domestic news, Marriages, &c.

III. The subscribers to pay on delivery of each volume, bound and lettered, one Dollar, to those who do not subscribe, the price will be ten shillings.

AN ABSTRACT

Of the principal alterations in regard to the Revenue from distilled spirits, made by the Act of Congress of the eighth day of May, 1792, concerning the Duties on Spirits distilled within the United States.

SECT. I. DECLARES, That the present duties on spirits of native or domestic materials shall be reduced on and after the first day of July next. The duties on the first class of proof (that is on spirits of the strength of common proof Whisky) are to be lowered two cents, from the former duty of nine cents per gallon, to seven cents. The stronger spirits of native materials are to be lowered in due proportion. But to accommodate those who have had the right to pay according to the capacity of the still (that is the country distillers) and distilleries of the customary extent in the inland towns, &c. the following arrangement and reductions have been made by Congress, to take place after entering as directed in the second section. Distilleries in cities, towns and villages (the whole capacity of the stills in which do not amount to four hundred gallons) may pay fifty four cents, instead of the former duty of sixty cents for each gallon, that the still will hold or measure, for a whole year's distilling therein. All distilleries in the country may pay the same reduced duty of fifty four cents.—That is, a still of one hundred gallons in the country, or in a city, town or village (if there be not in such town-distillery stills altogether equal to four hundred gallons) will pay 5400 cents or 54 dollars for the whole year. Or the distiller may, if he chuses, take out a license, to be applied for at the Collector's office, for one month, at ten cents on every gallon the still will measure or hold, or for more than one month at the same rate of ten cents per month for every gallon the still will hold: or the distiller may pay for the spirits he shall actually distil through the year, at the rate of seven cents for each gallon of common Whiskey proof, or first proof liquor distilled; and so in proportion for what shall be stronger than common. The law gives these elections or choices to the distiller, and requires of him to make known his choice in one or the other way in writing, a form for which the Collector will furnish. The distiller will then receive a license, signed by the Supervisor, if he intends to pay by the capacity of the still, and not by the gallon distilled. If he does not make his choice, or acts contrary to it after chusing, then he is to pay fifty four cents per annum on every gallon the still will measure or hold. No fee is to be charged for the license, nor for any other papers which may be furnished to the distillers or others, or which shall be required of them. The license will mention the day when he is to begin, and the day when he is to end his distilling. It is to be signed by the Supervisor, and counter-signed by the Collector. If the distiller elects to pay the monthly rate of ten cents; he must not distil before, nor after the limited time for which the license is, without getting a new license, under the penalty of two hundred dollars.

SECT. 2. Directs at least one office of Inspection in every county in each district or State. Every possessor of a still, of whatever size, whether it be employed in distilling or not, is to enter his still in the course of the month of June in each year. Stills bought or in any way procured by a resident in any county, or brought into a county by a person moving into such county, are to be entered at the same office, within thirty days of their procuring or removing them, and before distilling with them. The entry is to describe the still, and to mention its capacity, the place where it lies, and in whose possession it is, and whether it is intended for distilling or for sale, and if it shall have been removed into the county, from whence it was so removed. The penalty for omitting to enter a still as above required, is (Sect. 13) two hundred and fifty dollars on the owner or possessor.

SECT. 3. The owners and possessors of stills are jointly and separately liable for the duty, as is the still itself, and the owner of the land upon which a still shall be worked, unless the person be a tenant on lease for a year or more, or unless the owner of the land can prove the distiller to have been a trespasser or an intruder on
