Extract of a letter from Fayette-Ville, August 2, 1788.

"A gentleman of this town arrived last evening from Hillsborough, which place he left on Thursday morning. — At that time the constitution was warmly debated upon. It was thought that the convention would adjourn rather than reject it, after agreeing to certain objections to be held out for amendment. It is thought should a confirmation of its being adopted in New-York be received before the final question was put, it would have great weight. No day was then appointed for the final question. We have great reason to expect the seat of government will be fixed here; 128 dead votes for Fayette-Ville the first balloting, 136 will be a majority. The other places in nomination, are Tarborough, Smithfield, Newbern, Wake Court-House, and the Forks of Deep and Haw Rivers; the interest opposing Fayette-Ville so divided, that no one place can count more than 45 votes, Smithfield the greatest number. There is no doubt but a number that voted against Fayette-Ville the first balloting, will now join our interest. The opposers of Fayette-Ville wish to prevent its being fixed at any place. The motion was made last Wednesday morning, by Gen. Lock, to bring on the balloting for the seat of government, but they were so much taken up with the other business the motion was lost. The friends to Fayette-Ville meant to bring it on the next day. It is expected the convention will rise this day. An express was sent from here last night, with a deed from the proprietors of the new brick house in this town to the state, for the use of government, should they think proper to make this town the seat of government. The express has not yet received."

Extract of a letter from Hillsborough, July 28.

"The state of Franklin is come to an end, and Governor Sevier gone off with about forty adherents, with whom he has made an attack on an Indian town, and killed a Chief called the Great Tassel, his son, and 25 more, which has provoked a war that will no doubt produce more murders; but the over hill members seem to talk of the war as rather troublesome than formidable."

To the PUBLIC.

THE liberty of the press, procures not only an asylum to the good part of society, but leaves the community at large to judge of disputes. My character having been arraigned by sedition! my life having been sought after by conspiracy, in my own house, I am obliged in this public manner, to vindicate myself by the following observations: and I call upon any to deny my remarks. Has not the cold hand of poverty ever shared of my bounty? Has not my table (when keeping house) been ever spread to the stranger? Has lenity and compassion been strangers to the unfortunate prisoners, whose fate led them within the compass of my power? Has not my life, for eight years, been devoted to honorable pursuits, of which testimonies can be given in this place, by the officers and soldiers who have fought with me? When was I ever backward at an attack? When was I wanting to be foremost in danger, when the calls of my country demanded me? Did not I, when captured, endure the rigid treatment of an enemy without murmur? Did my fortitude ever forsake me in these trials, or did I let error mislead me? He that can deny these facts, let him step forward and meet me like a man; not like the porter or assassin.—Slander, though busy with her fame, cannot deny these observations. In my domestic apartment, I wish to be considered by the public, as rashly faulty; though even this matter would have been easily accommodated, had not uncommon pains been taken to perpetuate and revive the breach by the base and designing artifices of contempt. PETER BACOT.
